Pershing Reports New Victories on Meuse; 3,000 Germans Captured

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 2. — The American first army is sweeping the enemy before it, ably assisted by the French fourth army, on the west bank of the Meuse, according to General Pershing's communique made public today.

The communique tells of the counting of 3,002 prisoners, of whom 104 are officers. It was as follows:

"November 1, evening. The First American army continued its attack on the west bank of the Meuse in conjunction with the Fourth French army on its left.

"The perfect co-operation of 11 arms, infantry, artillery, aircraft and tanks succeeded in overcoming and disorganizing the enemy's determined resistance and breaking up his counter-attacks.

"Enemy divisions, rapidly brought up, were intermingled with units already in line in a vain attempt to stop our advance.

"Our victorious troops have already taken and passed beyond St. Georges, Landers et St. Georges, Imecourt, Landreville, Chemmery, Bayonville, Remonville, Betanne (probably Andevanne) and Glory le Grand.

"Up to the present 3,002 prisoners have been counted, of whom 104 are officers."

Majority of German War Cabinet for Abdication

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 2.—A majority of the German war cabinet favors immediate and unconditional abdication of the Kaiser, it was stated in an Amsterdam dispatch to the Daily Express today.

Only two members are against, Chancellor Maximilian and Vice-Chancellor von Payer.

Philip Scheidemann and Mathias Erzberger, respectively Socialist and Clerical, demand an early settlement of the question by the Reichstag, of which both are members. The Kaiser probably will await the decision of the Reichstag. There is now talk of a general election in Germany, putting armistice terms to a vote of the people.

BRAKES FAILED IN BROOKLYN CAR CRASH

By International News Service.

New York, Nov. 2.—Eighty-five persons were killed and more than 200 injured, according to the latest official figures compiled by the Brooklyn police, in the wreck of a crowded Brooklyn Rapid Transit "L" train during the rush hour last night.

Three inquiries to fix responsibility for the wreck were begun while friends and relatives endeavored to identify their dead and locate the injured in various city hospitals.

An investigation by District Attorney Harry Lewis of Kings County, in which the tragedy occurred, revealed that the great loss of life was due to the use of wooden cars by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company. Several of the cars were twenty-five years old. It developed also that the brakes were defective.

President Timothy Williams and other officials of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company have been called to appear before District Attorney Lewis today. Edward A. Lewis, the motorman of the ill-fated train, and one of the guards who survived, are held on a charge of homicide. The motorman was a dispatcher and was placed on the train to take the place of a striking motorman.

Mayor Hylan is conducting a separate investigation and has recommended the prosecution of officials of the transit company, believed to be responsible for the wreck. In addition the case will be presented to the Grand Jury.

Officials of the transit corporation have capitulated to the demands of the strikers and have agreed to accept the decision of the War Labor Board. The decision of the War Labor Board, which the corporation had refused to agree to when the strike was declared, recommended the reinstatement of twenty-nine motormen, discharged for being members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

His Leg Shattered, Col. Pike Kept on Giving Orders

By BERT FORD.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army North of Verdun, Nov. 1 (Delayed).—Details of the death of Lieutenant-Colonel Emery Pike of Des Moines, Iowa, which have just been disclosed, elevate him to the rank of heroes. After his leg was blown to shreds by a shell the officer refused to go to the hospital and continued to direct his men.

Pike was a divisional machine gun expert and formerly a cavalry officer. When the St. Mihiel fighting broke out Pike volunteered to go to the front line and organize machine gun forces and give the men the benefit of his experience. Pike assumed the duties of a machine gun captain.

During terrific shelling the American left a dugout to rescue a wounded private. Although his leg was shattered by a shell, Pike gave orders for several hours. The work of his gunners succeeded in cleaning out enemy nests and resulted in the capture of prisoners and guns.

Press dispatches which apparently referred to the same thing, however, put the number at twenty-three.

The Austrian troops are declared to be retreating in the utmost disorder. Vienna has heard a rumor that American troops have been landed in Pola. There was no confirmation of this report in official quarters.

GERMANY'S COMPLETE SURRENDER CERTAIN, WASHINGTON THINKS

BERLIN WAR CABINET FAVORS KAISER'S ABDICATION

When the armistice terms are made public, officials said, it will be found that every possible contingency has been provided for.

It was officially announced that the President is extremely desirous that the American people be kept informed of all that is transpiring, but that the present secrecy cannot be avoided. Officials, speaking directly for the President, asked the American people to be patient. It was pointed out that to make armistice terms such as have been under discussion public in piecemeal fashion would play directly into the hands of Germany. Nothing of the kind will be done, but the entire armistice terms will be made public as a whole at the earliest possible moment.

The report that at least six unofficial copy of the terms may be in the hands of the German high command received a little confirmation through the announcement that it was "possible that these terms would be transmitted through General Foch to the German commander in the field as well as through the President.

HOPELESS FOR GERMANY.

Under ordinary circumstances international etiquette would demand that these terms be furnished by the President to the Berlin government, inasmuch as they have been prepared in accordance with the request of Germany to the allies, sent through the President. However, officials said that prompt action was a very necessary requirement at the present time, and that a mere precedent for action would not be allowed to "gum the game."

Officials here were watching very carefully for developments on the Western front. They say the German war cabinet apparently has agreed that with Austria out of the war there can be nothing more done to save the situation for Germany. It would cause little surprise here should the German high command actually open negotiations with General Foch in the very near future without waiting for further overtures to be carried on through the foreign minister or the imperial chancellor.

It is understood that the Supreme War Council at Versailles approved in full the armistice plans prepared by the British and American naval authorities. These terms were discussed at some length by Admiral Benson and his assistants and Sir Geddes, of the British admiralty, when the latter was here a few weeks ago. While the details concerning them cannot be revealed, it was announced by officials who have seen them here and along general lines, that they provide for double safeguards and absolutely render the German navy, especially its submarines, powerless.

EXPECT TERMS SOON.

Just when a definite statement concerning the armistice terms and Germany's reply thereto may be expected was distinctly a puzzle among officials here today. Some believed that the reply would come within twenty-four to forty-eight hours at the least, while others said the middle of next week.

It is generally accepted that the war is about over so far as actual fighting is concerned, although, of course, there will be no letup in American effort until Germany's surrender is in the hands of the allies. Until even the military and naval experts who are calling attention to the fact that the German army and navy still are intact also say that with Austria and Turkey out of the war the forces of the allies are so tremendously superior to those of the Kaiser that a sharp campaign of less than a month would suffice to eliminate the latter.

And it is conceded that the German military chiefs realize this fully as well as do the experts of the entente. It is generally the belief of officials are so confident that whether it is a question of hours or days the complete surrender of Germany is an absolute certainty.

War Summary

The end of the war does not seem quite so close as it did twenty-four hours ago.

Austria-Hungary may be chaos, but its armies are battling in Northern Italy, not enthusiastically and entirely without success, but still fighting. Germany may be considering peace, but the Kaiser's soldiers are putting up a stubborn resistance to the allied attacks in Belgium and France.

Exactly what has been accomplished by the mission sent by the Austrian commander-in-chief to General Diaz to inquire as to armistice terms would make interesting reading, but apparently the Allied censorship on news has suddenly become rigid and nothing has been cabled about the matter, though the delegation passed through the Italian lines more than a week ago flag some forty-eight hours ago.

Every hour brings the Austrians nearer to complete disaster. Retreat across the mountains from which they swept down into the plain of Northern Italy is attended with many natural difficulties at this season of the year, and General Diaz may be relied upon to place many other and formidable obstacles in their path long before they can effect their escape.

The drive of the American First Army between Grand Pre and the Meuse is rapidly assuming the importance of a major operation. With the French they are pushing north into the enemy defences and executing a turning movement which must soon find the Germans operating in and around Valenciennes to fall back.

Advance in the Meuse region is bound to make its effect felt further north as well. The German hold on East Flanders is none too firm, as is indicated by the big gain made by the Anglo-Belgians in the drive which is still in progress, and cutting of the communication lines in the south should force speedy evacuation of all of Belgium as far east as Namur-Antwerp line and perhaps still further.

VALENCIENNES IS CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH

a twelve-mile front in their new attack in Flanders on Friday.

The Scheldt River had been reached as far north as Locke, only six and one-half miles south of Ghent.

TAKES 4,000 PRISONERS.

The German resistance indicated the presence of only strong German rear guards. The British took 4,000 prisoners. The text of the British report follows:

"The severe fighting begun yesterday south of Valenciennes continued this morning on a front of six miles. Counter-attacks were repulsed. Four thousand prisoners were taken.

"High ground was gained northeast of Valenciennes. The village of Preanau was taken by the Canadians. Northward, after hard fighting in the outskirts of Valenciennes we passed through Valenciennes, which is now wholly in our possession."

ADVANCE OVER FIVE MILES.

American and French troops have advanced from five to ten miles on a ten-mile front in Belgium in two days, taking nineteen villages from the Germans, the War Office announced in a report on Flanders operations.

The Germans have been thrown back from the Escaut Canal.

The text of the official report follows:

"The British have thrown back the enemy from the Escaut as far as Melden. Franco-American forces carried fiercely defended heights between the Escaut and the Lys. They advanced from five to ten miles on a ten-mile front in two days, capturing nineteen villages.

"French and Americans overcame stubborn opposition in the sectors of Deynze, Nazareth, Cruyshautem and Audenarde. One thousand prisoners were captured."

Tremendous Artillery Fire Aided Canadians Attacking Valenciennes

By JOHN T. PARKERSON,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army on the Western Battle Front, Nov. 2.—Canadian troops that attacked at Valenciennes were supported by the greatest artillery concentration they have ever had.

While the Canadians were driving ahead there British, Belgians and Franco-Americans were steadily advancing farther north, overcoming all German resistance.

The Canadians completely surrounded Valenciennes and then crossed the canal and are now well east of the place.

CITY IS MOSTLY INTACT.

Valenciennes was found to be intact except for a few fires. Thousands of liberated civilians went wild with joy, and there were scenes of jubilation similar to those at Ostend, Lille and Bruges. They said the Germans did not make any attempt to evacuate them. The Rhonelle River was found lined with German corpses.

A captured German officer said the men of the Sixth Division, one of the best in the German army, was completely gone and the men did not want to fight any more, but wanted peace at any price.

The revolution in Austria and the capitulation of Bulgaria and Turkey have shown the Germans that "all is up."

Americans from the Pacific coast and from Ohio, along with the French, have written a glorious page in history. According to latest accounts they had advanced nearly three miles in two days, liberating many civilians and several small towns.

GIVE MASKS TO CIVILIANS.

When the Germans fired upon the towns with gas shells the Americans gallantly gave up their masks to the civilians. The British did likewise.

Today at one place where the Germans were heavily shelling French and American soldiers were shifting the civilians in the use of the masks.

Americans and Germans engaged in hand-to-hand fighting at several places. In some of the towns the Germans mounted machine guns in the houses in which there were civilians. The Americans were unable to turn their artillery against these structures, but went forward with bayonets and drove out the Boches with the cold steel.

The allied artillery fire on the whole front is heavier now than at any other period of the whole war.

Americans Are Smashing Enemy in Argonne, Have Taken Over 3,000 Boches

By BERT FORD.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army North of Verdun, Nov. 2 (11 p. m.).—American troops today continued smashing the enemy lines in the Argonne sector.

They were encouraged today by the successes gained in Friday's fighting, in which they advanced more than four miles, captured over 2,000 Germans, seventy-five guns, many machine guns, much ammunition and liberated a number of villages and fortified points.

The Yankees advanced by a series of football rushes, which the enemy was unable to resist. They stormed the fortified heights, woods and ravines along the left flank of the enemy. The fiercest opposition was offered by the Germans, both to the advancing Americans and to the French troops, who banged forward on the American left for a depth of two miles on a twelve-mile front.

The French and American forces were acting in conjunction at a point near the Dun-Sur-Meuse, a hilly and wooded region which fairly bristled with machine guns and artillery.

Friday's success was due largely to the accuracy and violence of the American artillery in battering the enemy defences and to the whit of the "doughboy" in following the barrage.

Before sunset a battalion of American infantry was seen marching in column of squads to the south of Rhenery.

33D INFANTRY NOW IN ITALY, SAYS MARCH

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Last week was the most momentous from the viewpoint of the allied armies, General March, chief of staff, pointed out today. He declared that as a result of the fighting there has been a complete debacle of Germany's outlying allies.

Today the situation confronting the allied governments is that the enemy concentration is being very rapidly brought to Germany alone.

The general called attention to his statement of four weeks ago that the fall of Turkey. Now Turkey surrendering has destroyed the Austro-Hungarian morale and is rapidly eliminating that nation from the war.

Military operations of last week were marked by advances at various points, the greatest gain being made on the Aisne front. General March declared that as a result of the anarchy and unrest in Austria-Hungary the Italians will probably encounter little serious resistance from now on.

U. S. TROOPS IN ITALY.

United States Ambulance Battalions 5, 6, 11, 12 and 13.
The 332d Infantry.
The 102nd Base Hospital.
The 131st Field Hospital.
Various air units.

During the last week of the British advanced in Flanders between Lille and the Scheldt and to the south of Valenciennes. On both sides of the Argonne the French and Americans are advancing. Despite desperate resistance by the Germans, the American advance continues and a total of 3,300 prisoners have been captured.

It is a source of great satisfaction to the general that despite the widespread epidemic of influenza the troop movements continue overseas uninterruptedly, with practically no sickness. For instance, out of a certain 25,000 men transported only seventy-eight cases of influenza developed.

General March, to prevent spread of the disease, cut the capacity of the transports to 80 per cent. of their normal quotas, and all soldiers and officers wear their influenza masks as a precaution.

THE GRIP EPIDEMIC
How To Dodge It and What To Do If You Already Have It

If you are overtired, weak or run-down, you catch cold easily. If you have a cold, it is easy for grip to take hold. If you have the grip, it may easily lead to pneumonia, and that often ends fatally.

So first of all do not allow yourself to get run down or weakened. Build up new strength by taking Father John's Medicine, which gives health resistance to overcome disease.

But if you have a cold, do not neglect it. Begin taking Father John's Medicine right away. It is the logical, safe way to treat a cold and has proven its value by more than 60 years' success.

A mild attack of grip will usually yield to Father John's Medicine, but the getting-well stage is the danger point. It is then that the body, weakened by the grip germs, is open to attack by many other lurking disease perils. These poisons must be driven from the system, and Father John's Medicine is most effective by means of its laxative effect and because of its strength-giving, health-building, tissue-forming elements.

Remember, Father John's Medicine is a pure, wholesome food. Guaranteed absolutely free from opium, morphine, heroin, cocaine or any other dangerous drugs or alcohol. Get the large size—it contains more than twice the small size.

Answer This! Mr. Tague

YOU say you were robbed by the Boston Election Commissioners, whose chairman, Melancthon Burlen, has been a member of the Board for 20 years.

You say you were robbed by the State Ballot Commission, whose chairman, Henry V. Cunningham, has been a member of the Commission for 12 years.

Do you charge also, that the Boston American is part of this conspiracy to rob you, when it said editorially on October 31st:

"There never was more ado about nothing in a political campaign than this cry of fraud. It is really quite extraordinary that in a hot political contest waged all over a Congressional district, with a dozen contests for Governor and hot contests for Senators and Representatives going on in the same districts, there was not a great deal more evidence of fraud to be found than was produced. In Ward 6, where most of the allegation of fraud occurred, there were several very severe local contests. The only man caught attempting to cast illegal votes in the whole district was caught in that ward, and he said he had been hired to vote illegally for the purpose of helping a local candidate for Representative, and that nothing had been said to him about the Congressional candidates. All this flutter and screaming of fraud, without the slightest evidence of it, has resulted merely in discrediting the city and the Democrats of Boston on the eve of a great election. We cannot help suggesting to Mr. Tague that there must be other and better issues which he might raise than accusing a large part of the democracy of Boston of discreditable conduct."

I charge that you have agreed to do this dirty work for the Republican party, which is furnishing you huge sums of money to besmirch the Democratic party—to defeat Walsh and Long and the Democratic ticket—with the promise of a seat in Congress if the Republicans win.

AIR RAIDS CREATE PANIC AMONG GERMAN PEOPLE ALONG RHINE

PROVINCES CRY FOR PEACE

"Die Wacht Am Rhein" is being changed along that world-famous stream to a panic-stricken chorus that sounds suspiciously like "Where Do We Go from Here?"

Allie air raids are doing it.

Lloyd George's reprisal threat of a year ago is gathering its harvest.

London cables report that the civilian departures from the lower Rhine district of Germany and from eastern Westphalia, which began in a minor way when the Allied aviators first started bombing the fortified manufacturing city of Cologne on the Rhine, have developed into terror-stricken flight.

In July, August and the first half of September the British Independent Air Force made 249 raids over German territory. The raided district covered a thickly populated belt up and down the Rhine Valley about 250 miles long.

These raids obtained results, too. Aerial photographs confirmed the reports of extensive damage done.

As far back as April 5, last, it was reported from Switzerland that reveral aerial raids over Cologne had caused deaths of 250 civilians and soldiers. A single raid over Cologne, on May 15, caused the deaths of fourteen persons. Subsequent raids, within a fortnight, swelled that number to nearly 150.

THREAT OF PREMIER.

It was all part of the great retaliatory aerial program announced by Lloyd George in October of last year, when he said:

"We will give it all back to them and we will give it to them soon. We will bomb Germany with compound interest."

But the object was two-fold—to damage German railway centers and military depots behind the frontier fortifications and to break the nerve of the military rulers.

Early last month it became known via Holland that the German military authorities had found it necessary to order all lights darkened at night in the governmental districts of Dusseldorf, twenty miles north of Cologne, and in the greater part of Westphalia on the eastern side of the Rhine. The same precautions were being taken in other raided German districts.

The bare idea of the precious Rhine district being a target for air enemy would have been nigh inconceivable a few years ago to the average German.

The beautiful river is almost sacred to the Teuton mind. The powerful frontier fortifications to the west have ever been regarded in Germany as a precluding invasion by land.

The glory of the Rhine and the Rhineland has been a favorite theme in German music, art and literature.

From where the river bends northward at Basel on the south German border, all along the majestic course between Alsace and Baden, by the Rhine Palatinate, through Hesse and thence northwesterly through Prussia and over the Dutch frontier, the Rhine is lined with big rich cities.

CHIEF CENTERS OF INDUSTRY.

Among the chief cities on or near the river are such places of international fame as Strassburg, the fortified city of Kehl, first in Alsace; Karlsruhe and Mannheim in Baden, Worms and Mainz in Hesse, Coblentz, the powerful military base at the confluence of the Rhine and Moselle; Cologne and Dusseldorf in Prussia.

Three of the ten fortress districts into which Germany is divided range along the Rhine, the districts of Cologne, Mainz and Strassburg, from north to south in order.

PUBLIC SAFEGUARDS IN I. & R., SAYS BORAH

Edward A. Filene calls attention to the indorsement given the Initiative and Referendum by Senator William E. Borah. The letter, written to Joseph Walker, follows:

"My Dear Mr. Walker: I have your letter of the 24th. I have gone over the provision relative to the Initiative and Referendum in your proposed constitution with as much care as these busy hours would permit. I am not a believer in the Initiative and Referendum in the loose and unguarded form in which it so often appears. But this provision has been drawn with great care, and it is thoroughly safeguarded as, in my judgment, to make it a safe and valuable provision for the fundamental law of your State.

"It seems to me that you have framed a provision which can never be used to the detriment of the public interest and may in many instances be used to the great advantage of the public.

THRONG CHURCH AT FUNERAL OF PAUL KEITH

Practically every theatrical man and woman playing in Boston today, as well as the delegations of business and personal friends of A. Paul Keith, president of the B. F. Keith enterprises, attended the funeral services for him in St. Cecilia's Roman Catholic Church, Back Bay, this morning.

The celebrant of the mass was Rev. John G. McGarry, D. C. L., pastor, assisted by Rev. John J. Fletcher, master of ceremonies. Other assistants were: Rev. Charles E. Finnegan of St. Mary of the Angels Church, Roxbury, who attended Mr. Keith at his death; and Rev. James J. O'Brien of Somerville.

Cardinal O'Connell was represented by Bishop Joseph G. Anderson, who was attended by Monsignor John B. Peterson, president of St. John's Seminary in Brighton.

BODY IN BRONZE CASKET.

Perry's requiem mass was sung. John J. O'Shea, organist, the combined orchestras of Keith and the Boston Theatre played this program: Godard's "Adagio Pathetique," Handel's "Largo" and Chopin's "Funeral March."

The casket in which the body rested was of solid bronze and weighed almost a ton. It required twelve men to carry it.

The body was brought here from New York last night. New York paid its tribute to Mr. Keith yesterday. At the Campbell Funeral Church there, several hundred persons attended the simple service. Frank E. Campbell, representing the Funeral Church, accompanied the body to Boston. A large delegation of personal and business friends came on the same train.

Ushers at St. Cecilia's Church were Joseph A. Dennison, Richard A. Harrington, District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier, R. E. Watkins, T. H. Ratigan, George A. Johnson, John F. Royal, Charles S. Harris and B. F. Darling.

The pallbearers were George R. Hall, John F. Gorman, Peter J. Larson, John A. Kelliher, W. Munroe Hill, James T. McDonald, Thomas J. Carrigan, William M. Collins, Major W. Gordon, George H. Dennison and William H. MacDonald.

Honorary pallbearers were Reed Albee, John J. McCall, John J. Murdock, A. N. Hodgdon and C. H. Cullinan.

IN HALL IN HOLYHOOD.

On the committee representing the Theatrical Stage Employes present were Edward McGarron, John J. Barry, John F. Kendall, Edwin C. Broom, Fred J. Dempsey.

Interment was in Holyhood Cemetery in Brookline, and here the bronze casket was placed in a bronze box, in a specially constructed steel vault, similar to that used for the interment of J. Pierpont Morgan and Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy.

Among those who accompanied the body by special train from New York, were:

E. M. Robinson, S. K. Hodgdon, Clark Duy, Harry T. Jordan, Elmer Rogers, Harvey Watkins, Mr. Gorman, Harry Carroll, Carl D. Lothrop, Max Hart, Ted Benton, J. J. Maloney, Fred Hurley, Billy Arlington, Joseph Dougherty.

CHILD ASKS FOR BASKET AT CHRISTMAS

Two letters, which it won't hurt anyone to read, arrived in the evening mail of the Boston AMERICAN'S Christmas Basket Fund, designed to furnish Christmas dinners to the poor. This fund, which opened with the endorsement of Governor McCall, is now rapidly growing, thanks to the generosity of Boston's people.

The two letters represent both sides of the question of charity: the giving and receiving. One shows a typical case of the need which this fund is especially designed to relieve, and the other shines with the joy which comes from giving.

Here are the two letters:

"Dear Boston AMERICAN: I am a very poor little girl. My name is Filippa ——. My father was three years sick in bed and he died last month. I need your basket very much. My mother is an old woman and she can't work yer much.

"She only makes six or seven dollars a week and we have to pay rent and eat. I live at No —— street and am only seven years old and have only mother working for me and they had to trust my father's funeral because we couldn't pay for it. Please don't try to forget me for I want a happy Christmas.

"Yours vry truly.

"FILIPPA."

Boston AMERICAN Christmas Basket Fund:

"Dear Friends — Enclosed you will find one dollar for your fund with my prayer that the money may do good. A blessing goes to all who give and also to all who receive.

"I pray that the people all over the world may be happy. If they are happy they will be well and also they will be good, full of love, peace and the All Good, so freely given. God bless you, your paper and your works.

"Sincerely,

"JENNIE E. EVERETT."

HOLLWEG AND JAGOW "ARRANCING PAPERS"

Amsterdam, Nov. 2.—Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, former Chancellor of Germany, and Dr. von Jagow, former Foreign Secretary, have arrived in Berlin to "arrange war papers."

'ELECT WALSH, BACK WILSON'—MORGENTHAU

"We, the people, must form such a phalanx of approval around Wilson that no shaft, arrow or buckshot can penetrate us. You of Massachusetts should give him Walsh to help him in his great task."

With these words, Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, endorsed the candidacy of ex-Governor David I. Walsh for the United States Senate.

He was seated in a Pullman on his way to his city, where he spoke twice, addressing rallies in the cause of Mr. Walsh.

Speaking of the Republicans, Morgenthau said:

"Here is a band of conspirators as foul as those that met at Suratt's, not bent on physical destruction, but what is more pernicious, they want to destroy Wilson politically. It is the most dastardly attempt since the attack on Lincoln.

"They have met and decreed Wilson's downfall. They did not draw lots. They all wanted to help.

"Colonel Harvey has sent his personal arrows, Hays his little spitballs and Lodge his torpedoes, made probably at Oyster Bay.

"Roosevelt and Taft, the White House Twins, now Siamesed by their hatred of their successor, could not be separated long enough, so they took a double-barrelled shotgun and each pulled a trigger."

When pressed for information concerning the future of Turkey, he declared Turkey was financially, militarily and politically bankrupt. Then he continued:

Turkey is left only the danger of drifting into anarchy. The only solution of the Turkish problem is military occupation by the Allies, with the final decision of her status to be decided at the peace table.

HITS TURKS FIGHTING METHODS.

In Turkey the women are slaves. Eighty-five per cent. of the population is illiterate. The women must be liberated. The American missions might be aptly termed the Bright Spot of Turkey. They alone advocate and have advocated the advancement of civilization. They will play a great part in the future of the land of the Sultans.

While it is true that the Jew in Turkey has never been persecuted, it is also true that the Jew of Russia has left Turkey as quickly as possible.

Turkey has never been a land of possibility. America has been the promised land of the Jew. Here alone he has been able to find the opportunity he sought.

Turkey is not ready to be made a democracy. Until her people have had training and education she cannot be ready. Democratic ideas presuppose the ability of the individual to govern himself. The individual Turk cannot do this. His training has made him an under-dog.

It has been said the Turkish soldier is a gentleman and a good fighter. I say the Turk is the meanest kind of a fighter. Following the Gallipoli campaign I did not find one Turk in over 11,000 French, Italian and English prisoners. This includes those taken in the Caucusus and at Bagdad. This shows conclusively to my mind that the remainder of them were slaughtered. They are not white fighters.

AUSTRIA NEAR DISSOLUTION.

At the rallies at Chelsea and at Cambridge, Morgenthau said in part:

Woodrow Wilson, Lloyd George and George Clemenceau are the standard bearers of the masses. Turkey has at last, after 500 years of baneful domination of the Great Bible Lands, been crushed. Therefore, never again to be permitted to exercise her misrule over others, or to commit atrocities like those that stands condemned of.

Austria is on the point of dissolution. The German monster will soon be driven back into its own confines and then destroyed.

This war will not have closed with victory for the allied cause, the military machine of Germany, is absolutely destroyed. But the spirit of the beast of prey American character will come after our military success.

We must realize that this great hemisphere has been reserved for the special purpose of producing a new race of Americans who have resulted from the intermixture of the stricken of all countries.

URGES SUPPORT OF WILSON.

The masses and the classes are doing their share. Thank God that in 1912, when Roosevelt and Taft fell out we, the Democrats, had the wisdom to elect Wilson.

Woodrow Wilson is the man who stands now as our own beloved Lincoln stood in the year 1865. We, who so little can grasp all he has done and is doing, are asked by him to encourage him in his great task; to tell him that he has done well and faithful servant.")

I beg of you to realize the importance of your vote. Serve notice on Lodge that he must stop misrepresenting you! Vote and work for Wilson.

Ambassador Morgenthau was met at the train by Edward A. Filene, who also spoke at the rallies, and who was host to the distinguished visitor. Mr. Morgenthau left early today for Providence, where he is to speak today.

AGE REDUCED FOR OFFICERS' SCHOOL

The minimum age for entrance at the district officers' material school and steam engineering school has been lowered to twenty years of age. This gives an opportunity to young men who recently registered in the draft to obtain a commission in the navy. Applications may be made to the Navy Mobilization Station, No. 51 Cornhill.

"Smiles Across the Sea" for Christmas Day

A motion picture of all men, women and children of Wards 14 and 15 who have relatives or friends in the army and navy will be made at the Mission Hill playground on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The picture will be made FREE OF CHARGE and will be exhibited to the men in the service on Christmas Day.

Local Exemption Boards 14 and 15 will be represented before the camera, as it is planned to have the various draft boards head the line of march of soldiers' relatives in each succeeding chapter of "Smiles Across the Sea," the greatest movie serial in the world.

Bring the whole family! Bring a sign or banner containing a personal message to your boy in France. Signs like "Hello, George," "Here's Mother," etc., will help make the picture the more inspiring when thrown on the screen to be seen by the boys now in the trenches.

"Close-ups" will be made of "war-brides" and war-babies whose daddies were called away before their babies were born.

NEXT WEDNESDAY, November 6, all relatives residing in Wards 1 and 2, which include all of East Boston, will smile for the camera at Wood Island Park.

CHARLESTOWN AND SOMERVILLE soldiers' relatives will be filmed on SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 9, at 2 p. m., at the Charlestown Playground, Sullivan square.

SOUTH BOSTON relatives will be filmed at Marine Park, City Point, on Sunday, November 10.

Read the Boston AMERICAN every day to learn when your district will be filmed.

All costs and responsibility will be assumed by William Randolph Hearst and the International Film Service, Mr. Hearst's great moving picture organization.

SNAP 'SMILES' BY THOUSAND IN DORCHESTER

The place was Franklin Park. The time 2 o'clock. And the "girl," multiplied by thousands, appeared in the wives, the mothers, the sisters and the sons who left behind him when he went off to war in France.

For through all the light hours of the afternoon, patiently and with enthusiasm, the relatives waited their turn to be filmed in the "Smiles Across the Sea" pictures of the Hearst newspapers.

One of the most notable features was the large number of Jewish organizations which, in groups, marched before the camera, with standards that told who they were.

The Dorchester Soldiers' and Sailors' Relief Society, which had arranged for a large attendance, was one of the first to be filmed. The marchers bore on a large sign the name of the organization.

Broad smiles, cheerful faces, upturned to the camera mug, was the unbroken rule. Many of the younger girls were arrayed in German helmets. Miss Alice Allehy, president of the organization, had arranged that all the war material brought from France by Chelsea Lyons and Thomas Brennan of the American Transport Service should be in line to be photographed.

The members of Exemption Boards 16, 17, 18 and 19, who appointed in today's drafting of the big film, are:

Division 16—Dr. William B. Keeler, chairman; Charles J. Coltrell, secretary, and Harry P. Nawn. Helen B. Graves is chief clerk.

Division 17—Miles J. O'Brien, chairman; Elias Saklad, secretary, and Dr. Samuel Crowell. Mary O'Brien is listed as chief clerk.

Division 18—J. Walter Mullen, chairman; John P. Donery, secretary, and Dr. E. H. Lewis Harnett. Mr. Doherty is listed as chief clerk.

Division 19—Judge Michael H. Sullivan, chairman; William J. Hill, secretary, and Dr. Daniel Davison. Creighton J. Hill is chief clerk.

The members of Exemption Boards 14 and 15, of Wards 14 and 15, who will head the long lines of soldiers' relatives before the camera, on Mission Hill Playground, Roxbury, tomorrow, are as follows:

Division 14—Dr. Thomas V. Toohey, chairman; John C. Crossen, secretary, and Timothy J. Dacey. Mr. Crossen is listed as chief clerk.

Division 15—J. Frank McDonald, chairman; Stephen Maguire, secretary, and William M. Curtis. Miss Bertha Bauer is chief clerk.

More good cheer and the places where they will be filmed will be announced daily in the AMERICAN. Don't miss the announcement of your district.

8,000 FEET DROP IN STORM TO EVERGLADES

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 2. — Knocked down by a heavy windstorm 8,000 feet in the air and forced to land in the Everglades of Florida, where, exhausted and starving, he was later rescued by Seminole Indians, was the recent experience of Lieutenant Walter L. G. Smith, of the photographic detachment at Carlstrom field, War Department records made public today revealed.

Lieutenant Smith, who had undertaken the work of photographing a shorter line of flight over the Everglades to Fort Meyers, had reached an altitude of 7,000 feet above the great swamp when he observed a storm approaching from the south. Unable to get around it by changing his course, he started to climb still higher, however, he encountered a terrific wind from the north, which tossed the plane first on one wing and then on the other.

SIGHT INDIAN HUT.

Describing the territory in which he was forced to earth, the aviator, who is the son of Sergeant Major Thomas H. O'Connor of Rochester, N. Y., as a passenger, says:

"Flying over the Everglades is almost appalling—just one small island after another; water everywhere; innumerable mosquitoes, alligators, water moccasins, and blacksnakes. The mosquitoes attacked us in swarms. Meanwhile we drank no water for fear it would be infected.

"After spending a miserable night, we started to drift through the knee-deep mud, and without food. We were compelled to spend the night again in the swamp, sleeping on ground covered with water. By this time we were so nearly exhausted that we took a chance on the water.

"The next morning we resumed our way through the muck and finally sighted a hammock upon which was a camp inhabited by Seminole Indians. By sign language we managed to tell them with our needs. After being given food, we managed to make them understand that we wished to reach Miami.

AIRSHIP AGAIN IN ACTION.

"After being poled in a glade boat through a maze of waterways we reached the dredge at the end of the Tampa-Miami canal, where we were given food and a bed. The next day a motorboat took us down the canal, after which we hired a motor to take us to the flying field at Miami."

Every Miami effort to make ready to salvage the ship by means of a caterpillar tractor which was carried to the edge of the everglades on a canal boat, but because of storms this attempt had to be abandoned in favor of an expedition in "glade boats" furnished by the Seminoles. By this time a number of men were taken into the swamp and after a difficult travel a base camp was established. The motor, however, could not be recovered, as it was submerged in the water for more than a week.

Seminole glade boats were again dispatched to Miami for engine parts. The motor was finally started and the ship flown to Miami.

Smith's home is at No. 821 Montgomery street, San Francisco.

BROOKLINE AUTOIST HELD IN $500 BONDS

Alexander S. Fuller, eighteen, of Harvard avenue, Brookline, was in the Waltham Court charged with driving his auto recklessly. The case was continued until next Saturday and he was held under $500 bonds. Fuller, it is charged, ran over men, while driving along Northern avenue, Weston, when the car overturned rounding a curve.

ADLER MINISTER OF NEW GERMAN STATE

Amsterdam, Nov. 2.—Victor Adler has been named foreign minister of the new republican state set up by the Germans in Austria. The state controls the German troops in the Austrian army, said advices received today, and has proclaimed willingness to conclude peace in accord with Germany.

WALSH INDORSED BY SECRETARY OF LABOR

Former Governor David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator, spoke last night in Springfield, Holyoke, Chicopee and Northampton.

Mr. Walsh has received the following telegram from Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson:

"May I take this means of saying a word in behalf of your candidacy for United States Senator? The reactionary Republican element has carried on a campaign to elect Republican Senators and Congressmen, on the theory that the administration of politics meant that the Democrats must remain inactive and silent while the Republicans continued their effort to make the American people believe that the way to happen the President was to send people to Congress who were opposed to him.

"The real reason for the partisan activity of the reactionary Republican element is that more legislation beneficial to the great mass of the common people has been placed on the statute books, and a more sympathetic understanding of the rights and responsibilities of labor has been obtained during this administration than in all of those preceding it since the close of the Civil War.

"In view of your sympathetic interest in the great mass of the common people and the fact that you stand squarely for the principles enunciated by President Wilson, I trust that the people of Massachusetts will elect you to the United States Senate and thereby render a distinct service to your State and the nation."

ATTACKS WEEKS AGAIN.

In his speeches Mr. Walsh again attacked the record of Senator Weeks. He said in part:

"Mr. Weeks has professed great interest in the program of reconstruction to be undertaken after the war, but he had the opportunity to help vote for a real reconstruction measure providing for the education of our returning soldier boys—a provision for manhood reconstruction—he used every effort to defeat the plan.

"In his speech upon the floor of the Senate he attacked the plan as 'unnecessarily paternalistic' and 'unbridled nationalism.'

"Yet this be 'partersalism,' every humanitarian or labor measure and every law enacted to improve the condition of the people and to make them efficient and useful citizens must indeed be characterized. If this be 'paternalism,' then the glory of Massachusetts, its free public schools, the founding of Harvard College by its Harvard University and the Institute of Technology, and the education of John Q. Adams himself at Annapolis Naval Academy are all 'paternalism.'

DESERVES WELL OF COUNTRY.

"Thousands of Massachusetts boys in the service have had the advantage of a common and high school education, which interrupted their future studies to enter the service. Thousands of others from the mills and factories and from the farms went to work at an early age and had but little educational opportunities. All of them deserve well of their country, for they are sacrificing the early years of their lives, the years of study and preparation for the battle for existence.

Jealous Partisanship Blinds the Leaders of the G. O. P., Says Long

Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor, speaking at Springfield, Holyoke, Chicopee and Westfield, said:

"The campaign of the Republican machine leaders is a campaign entirely of criticism. They have no platform of their own. Actuated by jealous partisanship, the bunkers of the party seem ready to drive a wedge between the people and Wilson to destroy the morale of our people to gain their own private, partisan ends.

"Under the leadership of President Wilson, in the past six years, there has been passed more sound, progressive legislation than was accomplished by the machine leaders of the Republican party in the fifty years they controlled our government. The child-labor law released 2,000,000 children from industrial slavery. The creation of a tariff commission took the tariff out of politics, establishing a scientific system of tariff adjustment and abolished forever the scandalous system of doling out special privileges to the powerful corporations. The creation of a tariff commission took the tariff out of politics, establishing a scientific system of tariff adjustment and abolished forever the scandalous system of doling out special privileges to the powerful corporations. The Federal Reserve Act, Mr. Chairman, gave to the people of the United States a banking system that prevents panics, and the Federal Trade Commission Act has put a stop to the unfair practices of the trusts.

FINDS END OF RHEUMATISM

After Suffering Fifty Years Now 83 Years Old —RegainsStrength and Laughs at 'URIC ACID'

Goes Fishing; Back to Business, Feels Fine! How Others May Do It!

"I am eighty-three years old, and I doctored for rheumatism ever since I came out of the army, over fifty years ago. Like many others, I spent money freely for so-called 'cures,' and I have read about 'Uric Acid' until I could almost taste it. I could not sleep nights or walk without pain; my hands were so sore and stiff I could not hold a pen. But now I am again in active business and can walk with ease or write all day with comfort. Friends are surprised at the change."

HOW IT HAPPENED.

Mr. Asheiman is only one of thousands who suffered for years owing to the general belief in the old, false theory that "Uric Acid" causes rheumatism. This erroneous belief induced him and legions of unfortunate men and women to take wrong treatments. You might just as well attempt to put out a fire with oil as to try and get rid of your rheumatism, neuritis and like complaints by taking treatments supposed to drive Uric Acid out of your blood and body. Many physicians now know that Uric Acid never did and never will cause rheumatism; that it is a natural and necessary constituent of the blood, that it is found in every healthy lobe, and that without it we could not live.

These statements may seem strange to some folks, because nearly all sufferers have all along been led to believe in the old "Uric Acid" humbug. It took Mr. Asheiman fifty years to find out this truth. He learned how to get rid of the true cause of his rheumatism, other disorders and recover his strength from "The Inner Mysteries," a remarkable book that has been being distributed free by an authority who devoted over twenty years to the scientific study of this trouble. If any reader of the American wishes a copy of this book that reveals startling facts overlooked by doctors and scientists for centuries past, simply send a postcard or letter to H. F. Clearwater, 2764 A St., Hallowell, Maine, and it will be sent by return mail without any charge whatever. Send now! You may never get this opportunity again. If not a sufferer yourself, hand this good news to some afflicted friend.

The Stage

by R. J. McISAAC.

TRIO OF STRONG ATTRACTIONS MONDAY

Montague Glass, who introduced us to the social qualities of the East Side merchants, Potash and Perlmutter, created types which have supplied enough material to make three successful plays.

"Business Before Pleasure" is the third of the Abe and Mawrus series. Unlike its predecessors, it is not based upon the Glass stories, for the idea of putting the pair of fun-makers into the motion picture business was suggested to Glass by Al Woods, the astute producer. Jules Eckhard Goodman, author of "The Man Who Came Back," collaborated with the creator of the types.

Considerable trouble was met with in selecting a title. The first play was "Potash and Perlmutter," the second "Potash and Perlmutter in Society," and the third was originally styled "Potash and Perlmutter in the Movies," but it was so long it wouldn't go in a newspaper ad unless the producer took a page. Besides, the literal public might think it was a motion picture.

"Business Before Pleasure" was a sufficiently characteristic title, and it was finally adopted.

The idea of putting Abe and Mawrus on the stage originated with A. H. Woods. Having secured the consent of Glass, whose character sketches had become famous, he sought a playwright and engaged numerous well-known dramatic writers, who either announced them impossible of being dramatized or submitted manuscripts which were impossible.

Charles Klein, author of "The Lion and the Mouse," finally agreed to try after securing a large advance payment in case he failed. When the play was ready most New York theatre managers refused to house it, fearing that the Jewish patronage would bitterly resent being caricatured on the stage. Finally it got a hearing, and the Jews themselves enjoyed it most. The rest is stage history.

Unhand Muh, Villain!

"Tiger Rose," that crashing melodrama of the Canadian Northwest which Willard Mack wrote and David Belasco staged, will occupy the Tremont Theatre beginning next Monday.

Leonore Ulric and the original New York cast, without important exception, will present here a piece which caused a veritable sensation in New York for more than a year.

"I frankly love melodrama," declares David Belasco, speaking of his latest bulleyes. "So does everybody else in his heart. Styles change, in the drama, but melodrama goes on forever. There was a vogue some years back for problem plays, and then came a perfect deluge of sex plays, disgusting expositions of the white slave traffic and sex education. But through them all the play of primitive emotions has enjoyed a steady prosperity.

"From 'Nick of the Woods,' written by Miss L. H. Medina, and produced by the stock star company which Joseph Proctor headed some thirty-six years ago, there has been no variableness in the history of the success of the well-constructed melodramatic play.

"The Bret Harte stories were as popular in their dramatized form as ever they were between the covers of a magazine. Spencer and De Wendt's 'Ell, the Arkansas Traveler,' enjoyed tremendous patronage. Bartley Campbell's 'My Partner,' 'The Girl I Left Behind Me,' which I wrote in collaboration with Franklin Fyles, and my own more recent productions, 'The Rose of the Rancho' and 'The Girl of the Golden West,' were pretty good indications that the public loves thrills. I think it is because the American people as a race are melodramatic."

Swish, It's Skinner's Sword.

Otis Skinner is one of those actors who needs to wear a sword.

The sword as a weapon of war is fast disappearing. Neither the English, French or American army officers use it except for ceremonial purposes, and while the German officers seem to stick to it, its use has been more effective on their own men than the enemy.

But you give Skinner a sword and a cloak and a pair of high boots and you have before you the finest romantic actor that America can produce.

To be sure, he didn't wear a sword in "Kismet," but he certainly wore a sword cane, and he fought well with a knife. As Antonio, the organ grinder, he lacked something. It is very much for an organ grinder to swashbuckle.

But in "The Honor of the Family" Otis Skinner has a role which fits him like a uniform of a second lieutenant. It was made for him. He is unique.

It must be ten years since I enjoyed his Colonel Philippe Bridau, and I can assure you I intend to repeat.

By the way, Mr. Skinner's leading woman is the beautiful blonde whose personality was so wonderfully displayed in the bathing suit scene of "Seven Days' Leave," when she played a German spy—Miss Evelyn Varden.

Some Fortunetsms.

Stuart Walker, producer of "Seventeen," and now engaged in defending its claim of authorship against two pretenders who desire the fame and royalties which go with a successful play, is the owner of the Fortinanteau Theatre.

"What's become of the Fortinanteau?" I asked him during a brief chat at the Plymouth the other night.

"This company intended to bring it to New York from Chicago, where it is stored, but the government wouldn't give them an extra baggage car, so it was left behind.

"Did it take a baggage car to carry a Fortinanteau?"

Walker laughed. "The Fortinanteau had expanded quite rapidly during its last season, and its repertory had grown so large that it filled several trunks instead of a portmanteau. I haven't abandoned the idea of a tiny theatre which can be set up in any hall and give artistic performances, but I don't think this is the year for such an enterprise.

"Everybody who makes a play out of a book is criticised for leaving out something which the readers particularly liked.

"Of course there were many wonderful situations in "Seventeen" that couldn't be packed into a play. There were incidents that were amusing as Mr. Tarkington told them in his wonderful manner, but which would have degenerated into low comedy if we had tried to stage them. For example, the time he got his trousers covered with paint. Mr. Tarkington thinks our little play worthy of bearing the name of his wonderful book and that satisfies us."

Winninger Week, Not Weak

As a token of their admiration and esteem for Charles Winninger, the principal support of Lew Fields in "Friendly Enemies," now on the eve of its farewell week at the Park Square Theatre, both Mr. Fields and Mr. Woods, producer of this delightful comedy, have designated the closing week as "Charles Winninger Week." Mr. Winninger, who has shared with Mr. Fields the press and public's enthusiastic indorsement of the play, will leave the organization upon its farewell performance next Saturday evening, November 9, and enter the service of the United States army. Mr. Winninger will leave almost immediately after the performance for his home in the West preparatory for his early departure to camp.

Apologies to "Chu Chin Chow"

There is a strong strain of small boy in Morris Gest, which may explain why he is so uniformly successful a picker of winners, since cynical people declare that the theatre-going public has a twelve-year-old mind.

The producer of "Chu Chin Chow" reveals it in a love for freaks.

Without desiring to bunch any of the individuals concerned, they all got their jobs originally with Elliot Comstock and Gest because they were out of the ordinary.

Lionel Braham came here from England with Granville Barker in "Androcles and the Lion." In that Shaw historical burlesque he played Christian with a quick temper, and he was about seven feet high and otherwise proportioned like David's sparring partner.

When Gest saw him he put him under a five-year contract without knowing what he was going to do with him. Immediately he played the part of the ship captain in "The Wanderer," who walks off the stage with a full-blown damsel under each arm. This mention there was the giant robber chief, Chu Chin Chow, which fitted Braham as though he were born for it.

Down in Atlanta, Ga., there dwelt a colored gentleman who was fully eight feet tall and a local celebrity. An Atlanta newspaper man told Gest about him, and he got a job immediately. In "Chu Chin Chow" this individual walks through the "mean street in Bagdad" and makes love to a colored damsel on the roof of a house. Originally he picked the girl off the roof and carried her off. Unfortunately, he has developed rheumatism and has been compelled to cut that out.

The other day they sold the menagerie which had traveled with "Ben Hur" for some fifteen or seventeen years. Morris Gest bought the camel.

"What are you going to do with it?" he was asked. "Already have a camel in 'Chu Chin Chow.'"

"Use it to understudy this one," he replied.

"Black Walnut" Lizzie

Ann McDonald, the new leading woman at the Castle Square, asked Maud Odell, whom she met in New York during the late-lamented layoff, if she thought she would like it up there.

"Like it," replied Miss Odell. "I came for one week and stayed eighty-three."

The old Castle Square favorite, excuse that word old, Miss Odell, is now one of the individual hits of "Madame ——," playing Black Walnut [illegible] the third wife of Mat Van Zandt, the perennial lover of the play.

I saw Miss Odell in the trenches, as the actors in "Maytime" call the underground dressing rooms of the Majestic Little Theatre, just as she was about to go into her dugout to make up for Lizzie.

"I am a business woman," she declared, "if you don't believe it look at these. Whereupon she produced a pair of pince-nez glasses and installed them upon her countenance. "I run a hotel down in Sea Island, Carolina, and I have to read the market reports every day to see if I am getting stung."

"How are you behaving on the food regulations?"

"Oh, I'm for them; all us hotel folks are. I am looking forward to the day when the guest buys his dinner check, is allowed to look in the dining room door and tipping the hat check girl liberally departs after a Christian Science meal."

Historic Stock Reopens.

I dropped into the Castle Square one afternoon during the past week and found Manager Clarke superintending the labors of a large crowd of workmen who were making some very important changes in the stage and auditorium.

The apron, which was a feature of all theatres built more than a quarter of a century ago, has been removed, thus making the footlights a straight line between the side openings instead of an arc jutting out into the auditorium.

A very solid but attractive portal has been constructed upon the stage, reducing its width and height by several feet, thus assuring that dialogue on the stage will be more distinctly heard in the auditorium, and permitting cosier seats for all except the spectacular productions, when, of course, the old stage dimensions can be restored.

Mr. Clarke, through his stage director, Mr. Masson, has engaged a talented company, and has already announced a quartet of very strong recent successes which have just been released for stock. "Cheating Cheaters," the opening, will be succeeded by the "Misleading Lady."

More Copley Novelties.

Henry Jewett has planned an interesting repertory for the next few weeks at the Copley Theatre. After "Officer 666," the popular modern farce which is to be acted next week, he will give Boston playgoers an opportunity to see two interesting plays that have never before been given in this city. One of them is "Lazside's Career," a dramatic study of a radical youth in the midst of a political career which is hampered by a love affair. It is the work of Harold Brighouse, one of the leaders in the Manchester school of dramatists that have called so much attention to themselves during the past few years. The other new play, new to this country as well as to Boston, is "Hindle Wakes," written by the late Stanley Houghton.

McISAAC says that

"GOING UP," the musical version of "The Aviator," has enjoyed a prosperous week at the Colonial. This musical farce enjoys one of the brightest scores in a popular vein in several seasons, and with such people as Frank Craven, Edith Day, and Marion Sunshine in the cast, not a chance for fun is lost.

"CHU CHIN CHOW," the mammoth musical extravaganza, with its vivid colors, its massive settings, its huge cast, its fine acting, and its good music, is one of the kind of attractions you can't afford to miss.

"MAYTIME," at the Majestic, with William Norris, Charles Purcell and Peggy Wood, is nearing the end of its long run. It is an exquisite operetta of a very original type.

"FRIENDLY ENEMIES," one of the best war comedies yet to be put on the stage, winds up its run in Boston next week because Charles Winninger, one of the two featured actors, is going to war. "SEVENTEEN," Stuart Walker's comedy of youth and its problems, with special reference to dress suits, has already attracted Boston by its unusualness, its humor and its good acting.

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN," a historical feature film dealing with the war from its beginning to its inevitable conclusion, is worthy of special attention.

TREMONT THEATRE

David Belasco sends to the Tremont Theatre next Monday his big New York success of the past season, "Tiger Rose," which comes to this city headed by Leonore Ulric, William Courtleigh and Fuller Mellish.

Rose Hocion, the French-Canadian heroine of "Tiger Rose," is one of the most vivid characterizations of recent years and has made Miss Ulric celebrated on the speaking stage as she already is in the silent drama.

The scene of "Tiger Rose" is laid in the Canadian Northwest. The piece was written by Willard Mack and staged by David Belasco. It is a frank melodrama of the primitive and elemental passions and one of the most perfect of its type.

In addition to the girl part, "Tiger Rose" presents a splendid representative of the Canadian Northwestern mounted police, a wonderful old French Canadian priest and the customary types of the woods.

The broken English and quee mannerisms of Pierre La Dey and the quaint and occasionally profane language of the untutored heroine give comic relief to a powerful and thrilling story.

Rose's lover is a fugitive from justice whom Michael Devlin, the redcoated policeman, is hunting down. How she parries the inquiries of the law and in time brings about the salvation of her lover is the story of the play.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

Otis Skinner, America's foremost actor, comes to the Hollis Street on Monday night in his greatest role, that of Colonel Philippe Bridau, in "The Honor of the Family."

The play was made by Paul M. Potter out of Emile Fabre's "La Rabouilleuse," which, in turn, was drawn from Balzac's novel, "Un Menage de Garcon." Scenes taken have to do with Colonel Philippe Bridau's victorious campaign against Commander Gilet and Flora, the adventuress, who have gained possession of his miserly old uncle, Jean Rouget, and plot to secure his fortune. With Gilet Philippe has little trouble. Having provoked a quarrel, he kills him.

Flora gives him much trouble. Cunning she employs against him necessitates an expansion of intellectual power, which, in its suddenness, is one of Balzac's rare inconsistencies. Failing to become his mistress, she undertakes to have him murdered. But the results, and the methods employed in obtaining those results, are best to be realized by seeing Mr. Skinner's delightful performance at the Hollis Street.

The cast surrounding Mr. Skinner is said to be one of unusual excellence, and includes such well-known names as Miss Evelyn Varden, Ruth Rose, Margaret Calvert, Robert Harrison, Harry Burkhardt, Alexander Onslow, George E. Riddell, John Rogers, Walter F. Scott, Thomas Donnelly and Marshall Birmingham. The production is of the usual high Charles Frohman standard.

WILBUR THEATRE

The most important event of the week is the first appearance in Boston of Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr in "Business Before Pleasure" at the Wilbur beginning Monday evening. Mr. Bernard and Mr. Carr are the creators of those famous characters of fiction, "Abe" Potash and "Mawrus" Perlmutter, and so great has been their success in these roles in the various plays in which they have been a part that their appearances have been confined to New York and Chicago during the past five years.

"Business Before Pleasure" is the third of the notable comedies in which these two unique characters by Montague Glass have been the central figures and has exceeded in popularity even the remarkable pace set by its two predecessors. It is under the direction of A. H. Woods, who founded the theatrical firm of "Potash & Perlmutter," and is the work of Montague Glass and Jules Eckhardt Goodman. The comedy is in three acts and four scenes, most of the action taking place in a motion-picture studio. Not only are the sayings and bickerings of "Abe" and Mawrus" excruciatingly funny, but the situations in which the two partners find themselves in their new business afford a source of continual merriment.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

The season of the new stock company at the Castle Square Theatre will begin Monday evening with one of the most popular and entertaining of modern plays. No more satisfactory piece could be selected than "Cheating Cheaters."

The best description of "Cheating Cheaters" is to call it a crook play. And it is a play of which the whole story cannot be told.

The play will be staged at the Castle Square under the direction of William C Masson, long and favorably known both in this city and throughout the country for his skill as a producer of plays. The cast will include the entire membership of the entire company. Nan Carey, the heroine who forms the central mystery of the piot, will be acted by Ann MacDonald, and the part of Tom Palmer will be taken by Dudley Ayres. Miss Betty Barnicoat, who needs no introduction to Boston playgoers, will appear as Mrs. Palmer, and Mark Kent will return to the Castle Square after an absence of several seasons in the role of George Brockton. Other parts will be acted by Blanche Frederici, Dorothy Tierney, Aubrey Bosworth, Teddy Leduc and Joseph Sweeney.

COPLEY THEATRE

"Officer 666," one of the liveliest of modern farces, will be given by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley Theatre next week. It is the work of Augustin McHugh.

The central figure in "Officer 666" is Travers Gladwin, a millionaire who lives for his London house a beautiful mansion in Park Lane. He goes upon a long tour, and when he returns home suddenly and unexpectedly he finds that his house is occupied by a stranger who claims to be a picture expert, and that he is about to purchase with the plunder of valuable paintings and bric-a-brac with which the house is filled. Gladwin has been longing for excitement in the midst of his monotonous career of wealth, and he now finds it in plenty.

This will be the first production of "Officer 666" at the Copley, and, staged under the personal direction of Henry Jewett, its humor and sensation will be skilfully brought out

KEITH'S THEATRE

Harry Watson, Jr., late star of Odds and Ends, will come to Keith's next week as the headliner in Jack Norworth's latest comedy success, "The Telephone Scene." This act is considered one of the best mirth makers on the stage and is certainly a credit to Manager Norworth. Mr. Watson will appear as Kid Dugan. Since Odds and Ends closed Mr. Norworth has taken many of his stars into his management and is presenting them in vaudeville.

Tarzan, the greatest living ape, will also appear on the bill. He does everything that man can do and his stunts are most mystifying. Other acts are Adolphus and company, Swift and Kelley, Ray Eleanor Ball and brother, Kimberly and Page, Whiteside Sisters, The Four of Us, and Harry Carroll, one of the foremost song writers of the country. The Pathe weekly and the latest edition of war pictures will also be shown.

GAYETY THEATRE

Everything new but the title is what Barney Gerard claims for his "Follies of the Day," which will be the attraction at the Gayety Theatre beginning with a matinee on Monday.

To back up his statement, Mr. Gerard states that he has written an entirely new book which he has christened "Polly's Going Up," and is in two acts and six scenes, taking for his foundation some of the incidents in "Polly With a Past." "Going Up," "Business Before Pleasure," "A Taller Made Man" and the big Oriental scene from "Chu Chin Chow," and blended the satirization into a well-knit story.

The company is headed by that trio of merry makers, Gertrude Hayes, Harry "Watch the Slide") Welch and Chester Nelson, who are ably supported by Sam Green, portrayer of character studies, the Du Val sisters, Dot and Viola, who have been entrusted with the soubrette and ingenue roles respectively; Mabelle Courtney, a cultivated coloratura soprano, the Theos Rounders, Harold Rick, Jack Geyer and Oscar Gardner, all have important roles.

"UP IN MABEL'S ROOM"

"Up in Mabel's Room" is the name of the latest A. H. Woods farce, which will be given its initial metropolitan performance at the Park Square Theatre on Monday evening, November 11, with an exceptionally notable company, including Hazel Dawn, Enid Markey, John Cumberland, Walter Jones, Dudley Hawley, Marion Tamen, Evelyn Gosnell and Harry Bradley.

SYMPHONY TO HAVE LONGER PROGRAM

By FRED J. McISAAC.

It begins to look as though Boston Symphony audiences were going to get more for their money under the French regime than when the Germans ruled the roost out in Huntington avenue.

Pierre Monteux's first program was two hours long, while the concert yesterday afternoon lasted two and a quarter hours. Having been accustomed to programs of no more than an hour and a half's duration Boston audiences are likely to get musical indigestion before the season goes much further if Henri Rabaud resembles Monteux who now yields the baton.

Beginning with Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, a work which is so bright and joyous that it will never become an antique, through a tone poem by Charles Martin Loeffler, "La Bonne Chanson," and Cesar Franck's "Les Eolides," a symphonic poem, so-called, it included two vocal numbers by Florence Easton of the Metropolitan Opera, and concluded with a ballet by Raval from "Daphnis et Chloe."

Florence Gertrude Easton was first heard by Boston audiences in Henry Savage's opera in English troupe back in 1905. She was then but eighteen. A few seasons later she went to Berlin with her husband, Francis Maclennan, also an opera singer, and they enjoyed great fame in the land of the Germans for eight or nine years. Returning she joined the Chicago Opera two seasons ago and last year achieved the Metropolitan, presumably her goal.

She sang the recitative and aria from The Marriage of Figaro "Dove Sono" and Lia's aria from Debussy's youthful cantata, "L'Enfant Prodigue," a work which was done in the days of the Boston Opera in dramatic form.

Miss Easton's voice is a lyric soprano of great warmth and beauty. The Debussy air was exactly suited to her tones and method, and she sang it with splendid effect. The soprano who can distinguish themselves singing Mozart are not numerous, and Miss Easton can hardly be counted among them, judging by her work in the Marriage of Figaro number. She sang it with little expression and an uneven quality of tone.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

Variety and distinction mark the bills announced for Loew's Orpheum Theatre through the week. For the first half the vaudeville will be headed by Carl McCullough, accomplished comedian of individual talents, who will present his new skit, which comprises novel comicalities as has not been shown here hitherto. The balance of the bill includes Archer and Belford in their comedy sketch, "The New Janitor," in which they do a little bit of everything to provoke laughs; Harold Selman and company, in the one-act comedy, "She Said Yes"; the Browne Sisters, dainty singers of songs in a new program; Herman and Clifton, singers and comedians, and the Martin Brothers, in acrobatic comicalities. On the screen will be shown the latest news and war pictures, a comedy, and the photoplay, "A Woman of Impulse," picturing Lina Cavalieri. The bill for the last half will be headed by the musical comedy act, "Miss America," announced as a military satire. It is presented by a company of ten, headed by Jean Waters and George Phelps.

PARK THEATRE

Manager Thomas D. Soriero is providing his patrons with a bill of merit for next week which will include the Pat masterpiece, "The Prussian Cur," an exposure of the famous spy system laid by the German authorities in the United States. Stirring events in Washington, strikes and mob riots, American and German military movements, departure of troops for Italy, etc., are all depicted in the picture. The scene after scene is built into a massive pictorial temple of patriotism. The war atmosphere is heightened by a love story of a young factory worker and a girl, both devoted to the cause of liberty, who are drawn together by the world tragedy. This production is in eight tremendous acts.

Olive Tell, the petite little Metro actress in "Secret Strings," provides the second feature on the program. Miss Tell's part deals with the dramatic events which follow when a girl of unusual beauty and charm finds the man she has married is a smooth and unprincipled crook.

The fourteenth episode of "A Fight for Millions," featuring William Duncan, contains new thrills and action. The Vitagraph comedy and the latest War News bi-weekly complete the picture program.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

When it comes to marrying a German Prince the average Belgian or American woman may be pardoned she protests; but when Marguerite Clark, who is featuring in "Out of a Clear Sky," playing the first half of the week at the St. James Theatre, refused to become a member of the family of a Hun Prince as his wife, her protests were more than words—she literally took the bit in her own teeth.

Mr. Nelson Waring, Boston's well-known pianist, will offer for the first time his latest march "On to Victory," which is considered to be a masterpiece of martial music.

Frank Sherman, that eccentric fellow, Vena Cooper Company Playlet entitled "One Xmas Eve," Palmer and Wall and the Sunshine Girls, in a miniature musical comedy, together with the latest edition of "The Hun at Play," Pathe News and Comedy, will complete the program.

BEACON THEATRE

Throughout the week at the Beacon Theatre there will be shown for the first times in Boston two photoplays that promise unusual entertainment. Private Peat, the veteran of the war, whose book on the war is among the most popular publications, will be shown pictured in his own character in a screen version of his story, "Private Peat." There is no plot in fiction which tells more startling adventures than those which befell this young man, and the photoplay should be as appealing and entertaining as could be conceived.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

A brace of superlative photo productions in addition to a number of notable vaudeville acts will comprise the bill for the popular Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, for the coming week.

The headline photoplay for the first three days will offer Clara Kimball Young in "The Reason Why," a production that is possessed of abundant human appeal. There will be the usual "big time" vaudeville in addition to other photoplay features. The leading photoplay for the concluding portion of the week will offer Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight."

BOSTON THEATRE

"The Romance of Tarzan" is the leading film at the Boston Theatre next week.

The vaudeville bill is an extraordinary one, with the Decorators in their rural comedy sketch, Kaufman Brothers are a clever pair of singers and talkers; Sampsell Musical Comedy is an entire new act; Jerome and Albright are a team that always makes a hit, and Coats and Duffy are originators of mirth and comedy.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Jacobs and Jarmon's well-known attraction, "The Golden Crook" company, will be the starting offering at Waldron's Casino for one week only, beginning with the Monday matinee. This is justly considered one of the standard bearers of the burlesque circuit, giving a program that is replete with novel and amusing features. Billy Arlington, the unctuous trump comedian, is at the head of the funmakers, and his well-known proclivities for provoking merriment argue well for the feast of fun and frolic in store surrounded by a company of unusual worth.

GLOBE THEATRE

The all-week bill at Loew's Globe Theatre will include the first showing of Lina Cavalieri, famous beauty and grand opera singer, in "The Woman of Impulse," a screen play of strong emotional effect. The other photoplay will be "When Do We Eat," picturing Enid Bennett as a girl of a hash-storming theatrical company whose adventures date from her playing Eva in "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

MODERN THEATRE

The two first-run photoplays to be shown at the Modern Theatre through the week will include "Private Peat," a photoplay founded upon the book of his war adventures written by Harold F. Peat, and with Private Peat himself in his own character. The adventures of Mr. Peat are of that species which war brings forth to confound the wildest fictionists and make their imaginative efforts puny and puerile. His endeavors to join the forces, which were delayed because of insufficient chest development, make a good start of the story. Finally joining, he was among the first few thousand Canadians to go overseas, and was with these undeveloped forces who sacrificed so much to hold the first impetuous German offensives in check.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

The bill at Lowe's Columbia Theatre for the first half will include Alice Brady in "Her Better Half," a scathing arraignment of present-day society, with the capable young star in an emotional role that calls upon her best gifts. The other photoplay is "On Guard," picturing John Barrymore in the screen version of the farce of like title, which made great success with William Collier during several seasons on the stage. Mr. Barrymore is equally at home in comedy roles as in heavy characters, and this has been pronounced one of his best screen vehicles.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE

Two excellent bills of combined photoplays and vaudeville acts will be offered at Loew's Franklin Park Theatre through the week. For the first half the vaudeville will be topped by Joe Cook, "The One-Man Vaudeville Show." Others will be Edmunds and Leedom in their comedy, "Going to the Wedding"; Southo and Tobin and the Kitties. On the screen there will be shown news and war pictures, a comedy, and the photoplay, "The Goat," picturing Fred Stone in his acrobatic comicalities. The bill for the last half will include Saymour and Dennett, George Randall and company in the one-act comedy, "Too Easy."

LANCASTER THEATRE

At the Lancaster Theatre for the first half of the week there will be shown Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl," in which this capable young comedienne will be seen pictured as a feminine prototype to the familiar character of boyhood, "Peck's Bad Boy." She is a wayward girl in a small town and indulges her mischievous traits to such good purpose that unwittingly she is instrumental in apprehending some bank thieves. She also meets with a romance which withholds her and points to happiness eventuating. The other photoplay will be Gladys Brockwell in the timely photoplay of the war, "Kultur."

PIANIST AT ST. JAMES

The music lovers of Boston and those who appreciate the fine points in music will have an opportunity on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday to hear one of Boston's well-known pianists, Mr. Nelson Waring, who will appear at the St. James Theatre the first three days of the week.

He will present an entirely new program and will offer for the first time in Boston his latest march, "On to Victory."

Turks Prepare to Flee.

In early March, Bedri and Djambolat, who was director of the railways, came to see me. At that time the exodus from the capital had begun; Turkish women and children were being moved into the interior; all the banks had been completely cleaned out and into Asia Minor; the archives of the Sublime Porte had already been carried to Eskishehir; and practically all the ministries, embassies and legations as well as most of the government officials, had made their preparations to leave. The director of the museum, who was one of the six Turks to whom Talaat had referred, "and other good things," had buried many of Constantinople's finest works of art in cellars or covered them with cement. Bedri came to arrange the details of my departure.

As ambassador I was personally accredited to the Sultan, and it would obviously be to my credit, said Bedri, to follow the Sultan wherever he might go. The train was all ready, he added; he wished to know how many people I intended to take, so that sufficient space could be reserved. To this proposal I entered a flat refusal. I informed Bedri that I thought that my responsibilities made it necessary for me to remain in Constantinople.

Only a neutral ambassador, I said, could forestall massacres and the destruction of the city, and certainly I owed it to the civilized world to prevent, if I could, such calamities as these. If my position as ambassador made it inevitable that I should follow the Sultan, I would resign and become honorary Consul-General.

TO LEAVE CONSTANTINOPLE.

Both Bedri and Djambolat were much younger and less experienced men than I, and they replied to me that they needed a man of maturer years to advise them in an international crisis of this kind. I must not only interested in protecting foreigners and American interests, but I was also interested, on general humanitarian grounds, in safeguarding the Turkish population from the excesses that were generally expected.

The several responsible heads of them containing elements which which we given to pillage and massacre, were clearly going insanely. I therefore proposed to Bedri and Djambolat that the three of us sit down and decided on a course of action. We took a map of Constantinople and marked the districts which under the existing rules of warfare we agreed that the allied fleet would have the right to bombard.

Thus, we decided that the War Office, Marine Office, telegraph offices, railroad stations and all public buildings could quite legitimately be made the targets for their guns. Then we marked out certain zones which we should insist on regarding as immune, first, the residential section, and the part where all the embassies are located, is Pera, the district on the north shore of the Golden Horn. This we marked as not subject to attack. We also delimited certain residential areas of Stamboul and Galata, the Turkish sections.

I telegraphed to Washington, asking the State Department to obtain a ratification of these plans and an agreement to respect these zones of safety from the British and French governments. I received a reply indorsing my action.

All preparations had thus been made. At the station stood the trains which were to take the Sultan and the government and the ambassadors to Asia Minor. They had steam up, ready to move at a minute's notice.

We were all awaiting the triumphant arrival of the allied fleet.

CHAPTER XVII.
OLD-FASHIONED DEFENCES OF THE DARDANELLES.

When the situation had reached this exciting stage, Enver asked me to visit the Dardanelles. He still insisted that the fortifications were impregnable and he could not understand, he said, the panic which was then raging in Constantinople. He had visited the Dardanelles himself, had inspected every gun and every emplacement, and he was entirely confident that his soldiers could hold off the allied fleet indefinitely. He had taken Thrace down, and he added so he had considerably eased that statesman's fears.

I was not Enver's conviction that, if I should visit the fortifications, I would be persuaded that the fleets could never get through, and that I would thus be able to give such assurances to the people that the prevailing excitement would subside. I accepted certain natural doubts as to whether an ambassador had a right to expose himself to the dangers of such a situation—the ships were bombarding one another every day—and promptly accepted Enver's invitation.

We left Constantinople on the Turkish Red Crescent automobile early as far as Panderma, an Asiatic town on the Sea of Marmora. The party included several notables: Ibrahim Hey, the Minister of justice; Hussein Pasha, the general who had command of the army which had deposed Abdul Hamid in the Young Turk revolution, and Senator Cherif Djafer Pasha, an Arab and a direct descendant of the prophet.

A particularly congenial companion was Fuad Pasha, an old field marshal, who had led an adventurous career; despite his age, he had an immense capacity for pleasure, and he was a feeder and a capacious drinker, and had as many stories to tell of exile, battle, and hair-breadth escapes as Othello. All of these men were much older than Enver, and all of them were descended from far more distinguished ancestors, yet they treated his stripling with the utmost deference.

Enver seemed particularly glad of this opportunity to discuss the situation. Immediately after breakfast, he took me aside, and together we went up to the deck.

Would England and her allies succeed in this enterprise? Would their ships at the Dardanelles smash the fortifications, break through and again make Russia a permanent force in the war? That was the main subject which Enver and I discussed, as for nearly three hours we walked up and down the deck. Enver again referred to the "silly panic" that had seized Constantinople and the surrounding villages of men in service should notify the bureau of any change of address.

The suggestion met with instant and huge success and Mr. Baxter hopes that the families of soldiers and sailors will continue to inform the bureau of their changes of address and thus facilitate matters both for themselves and for the departments in Washington.

Captain Finch, a British officer, is today mourning the loss of $140. His purse early and left his valuables on a chair at the foot of his bed, it is stated. When he got up and dressed he discovered his loss.

Private Burns Lenox, twenty-five, of the 42d Infantry, found guilty by Ayer court of a serious charge, was turned over to the military authorities for execution of sentence. He will be court martialled.

A military pass will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, on the drill field, near the main building of the Knights of Columbus. The affair will be erected on the knoll of a hill. Cardinal O'Connell has been invited and may attend.

IOWA SOLDIERS VOTE AT CAMP DEVENS

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Nov. 2.—Under authority of the Soldiers' Voting Act passed in Iowa in 1864 and amended in 1865, all men in this cantonment from that State who were not registered there by six months will be their enlistment may vote at the election to be held here Tuesday, according to William B. Votter, of No. 953 West Second street, Des Moines, Iowa, who called at the division headquarters to get a list of soldiers in the various commands and made arrangements for the conduct of the balloting. He was accompanied by Joseph M. Fuller of that State.

Governor William Harding of Iowa delegated the men to appear here, it is said, and furnished them with copies of the election laws. The election will be held in Hut No. 23 of the Young Men's Christian Association.

A roster of the Iowa soldiers will be prepared and each will be given a ballot, which, when marked, is to be placed in an envelope and deposited in a box. The latter will then be shipped to the State Capitol, in Des Moines, and opened.

Three or four months ago The Soldiers' and Sailors' Information Bureau, of which Charles S. Baxter is director, suggested that the families of men in service should notify the bureau of any change of address.

RADIO ELEVEN AND HINGHAM MEN MEET

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Nov. 2.—Radio students today were solid in the belief that the Hingham Ammunition Depot eleven would be taken into camp when they meet the crack Radio pigskin kickers at the Stadium. Their opinion was unanimous that Radio's untarnished record would be continued.

Should the Radio School come out victorious today, it will give them a clean slate of five victories. Added to that, should Hingham fail to score, it will be five games in which the Radio team has played without a single tally being scored against them.

Numerous inquiries have been made as to the disposition of the students at Radio School in the event of early cessation of hostilities.

Officials here would venture no opinions, but made it plain that no plans are being made to dismantle the plant here. Instead, they stated, the operation of the Radio School would continue with the same vigor until conditions make its use no longer necessary.

MURDER OF McCALL BY BIG BOODLE

Mr. Voter:

So often comes Election Day! With Election Day comes the Politician! And with the Politician comes shrieking and sobbing for you and yours.

Mr. Voter: If the Politician had not been with us every Election Day for a hundred years, you could suppose from his shrieking and sobbing that he was your best friend and your mother's, wife's, daughter's guardian angel.

Mr. Voter: The Politician, whether big or little, is just a stick feeder at the public crib who is with you to make use of you and yours to re-clinch his job for another term.

Mr. Voter: You know this. You know he cares no more for you and yours than the old drab rat in the pig sty cares for the garbage pail boy whom he lovingly leers at feed time.

Mr. Voter: Why let the Politician affect your life? Why not let him shriek his fear and sob his love while you go into the voting booth hand in hand with your horse sense and your conscience and put the cross where your manhood dictates? Why not? And why not do it this year when the world is topsy-turvy?

Mr. Voter: I don't care particularly whether you put your cross against my name for Senator. I did care a few days ago when I thought I was going to give the yellow hound Big Boodle battle to a finish, but after the epidemic had sliced off three weeks of the five weeks' battle time, and when on my first day one my automobile wreck anchored me with four broken ribs and a smashed collar bone, my battling ardor oozed and my beat-up-Big-Boodle enthusiasm gelatinized.

Mr. Voter: Why not, just for once, be a man, a he-man, and give the Politician who plays upon your millions and a quarter dollars and that I beat the scoundrels to a white flag finish and that as a result millions of you policy holders are no longer ruthlessly robbed. You know I operated the operation in a dozen other sections of your affairs. You know these things, but did you ever hear of my asking any office or other thing of value for what I did?

Mr. Voter: Listen to what the shrieking, sobbing Politician is giving you this year—"Your good dear soldier boy, your poor dear soldier boy must be protected, and I, the Politician, must be sent to Washington to protect him."

Mr. Voter: How do you retain your self-respect when you hear such campaign slush? Why don't you make up your mind on next Tuesday to put your cross where it will send the lying knaves into the tall timbers? Why don't you?

Listen:

Fireman and Pollce: For thirty years because of certain reasons which we both understand, although we have never screamed them from the housetops, you have been saying to me, "How can we repay you, how can we?" My answer has always been "Forget it."

Democrat and Republican Leaders: For years during my $5000 and $25,000 campaigns, during my fights while struggling candidates regardless of what party I was nominated by, you have said "For goodness sake tell us something we can do for you," and my answer has been "Forget it."

Priests and Ministers: For years and years you have said, "At least we can pray for you."

Hospital Matrons, Sisters and Nurses: For every humane institution in Greater Boston and many throughout the State, for forty years at Christmas, at New Year, at Birthday and at Anniversary Day you have said, "How can we help you?"

Colored Men and Women of Massachusetts: All of you are a friend of mine—Big Boodle.

Thousands and thousands of you have assured me during the past thirty years that you only awaited some opportunity to do something for me to show your gratitude.

Old-Time Sports, Ring Men, Hackmen, Horsemen, Dog Men, Hotel Men, Honest Bakers and Beer Keepers: During thirty years you have greeted me, although you knew I was strong for prohibition, with "Why don't you come around to us for something so we can even up?"

Well, all you good souls, now is your opportunity. I want, need, all you can do for me. Not only do I need your votes, but your good wishes and your prayers. I would ask your favors nor would I accept them under any circumstances more than the present—my battle with the Big Boodle of you, your friend—Big Boodle.

You Trolley Patrons CONSIDER The 10c Fare, How It Grows!

The crowding of Boston street cars is little short of criminal. Eastern Massachusetts with its millions of people, in fact one of the best street railway territories in America, is witnessing the tearing up of miles of tracks, bankruptcy of the lines and destruction of rural real estate values.

The bankrupt Boston L with a seven-cent fare is running steadily behind and the trustees contemplate asking for a higher rate. Yet Cleveland has a 6-cent fare and Washington a 5-cent fare, 6 for a quarter.

At a public hearing before the Public Service Commission in Boston Thursday of this week Receiver Donham served notice that unless a 10-cent fare is granted it may be necessary to shut down the entire Bay State system.

Do you know that Calvin Coolidge, Republican candidate for Governor, product of the lobby inspired succession system, was chairman of a special commission which reported a plan to the Legislature a year ago to relieve the condition of the Boston L which was ridiculed by the experts and proved inadequate?

Did you know that fear of facing the transportation issue was one of the reasons why the lobby refused to let the Republicans hold a State Convention this year?

Don't you think it is about time that a business man of great ability who is unfettered by connection with the selfish interests should take hold of our transportation question in the interest of the people?

Richard H. Long, the candidate of the business man and working man for Governor, will do this if you vote for him.

The opponents of the INITIATIVE and REFERENDUM dwell upon the alleged absolute powers of the first ten signers of an iniative petition.

Here is the TRUTH as to the NINE safeguards surrounding the adoption of an Initiative law in Massachusetts.

1—Legalizing of petition by signatures of ten voters, after proposed law has been drafted by the organization or group of citizens starting the movement. Next step—

2—Presentation of law to the Attorney-General, who must certify: (a) that it is in proper form for submission; (b) that no measure substantially similar has been submitted within three years; (c) that it does not relate to religion, judges, courts, or any of the other eleven subjects excluded from the Initiative; (d) that it does not include unrelated subjects. Next step—

3—Filing of petition with Secretary of State and procuring, on descriptive blanks printed by him, of 20,000 signatures of voters, not more than one-fourth from any one county. Next step—

4—Introduction of the petition in the Legislature by the Secretary of State, followed by: (a) reference to and hearing before a legislative committee; (b) written report by the committee to the Legislature; (c) debate and vote by the Legislature thereon, with right to adopt a substitute for submission to the people at the same time. Next step—

5—Filing by a majority of original ten petitioners of any desired amendment to the law certified by the Attorney-General to be perfecting and not to change the substance. Next step—

6—Procuring and filing after adjournment of Legislature of 5,000 additional signatures of voters. Next step—

7—Mailing by Secretary of State to every registered voter of: (a) full text of law; (b) report of legislative committee; (c) statement of number of votes cast for and against the law in the Legislature; (d) such other information and arguments for and against it as the Legislature may direct. Next step—

8—Description of law upon ballot as drawn by Attorney-General, any substitute submitted by the Legislature being grouped with it as an alternative. Last step—

9—Adoption of law by the people, provided: (a) that the Yes vote equals at least thirty per cent of the total number of ballots cast at the election, including blanks; (b) that the Yes vote is larger than the No vote; and (c) that it is larger than the vote for any substitute submitted by the Legislature.

ACTIVITY IN STOCK MARKET IS MODERATE

The market was irregular and only moderately active today. Starting nearly unchanged, prices melted until nearly everything showed a loss. A rally then carried quotations upward, and in the second hour stocks were back to par or opening, in some cases higher. Best Sugar took another drop, receding 7-8, or 4 points. Mexican Petroleum lost 1 at 150¾, then rallied to 156½. It sold as high as 157.

U. S. Steel opened at 101, then sold down from 101⅜ to 100⅝, off ⅛, selling afterwards at 101. Bethlehem B opened up ⅜, at 114¼, slid off ⅛ from the high, then sold at 114. Crucible Steel was up ¼ at 54¾, after losing ⅜, at 54⅛. Republic Steel receded 1¼ to 73¼ and Midvale after losing ⅜ at 42, sold for 41¾, up ⅜.

Anaconda sold from 67¾ to 70¼. Inspiration 53½ to 54⅜. Kennecott 33⅜ to 33⅞ and Utah from 83 to 84¾.

Reading sold down to 83¼, off ⅜; Southern Pacific after losing ⅝ at 102 gained ⅜ at 103. Union Pacific sold from 131½ to 132. New York Central rose ⅝ to 78⅝.

Marine pfd. rose from 119⅝; Corn Products lost ⅜ at 47½, then advanced 1¼ to 49¾; Central Leather lost ½ at 62⅝. Steel Foundries sold down to 87¾, off 2⅜; Sumatra Tobacco at 106¾, lost 1¾. American Can went from 43, off ⅜, to 43¾.

The Boston market was firm. American Telephone, 107½, gained; Boston Elevated 72 and United 145 were up ½ each; Alaska Gold 6½, rose ⅛; United Shoe 43¾ and Fairbanks 56¾ were unchanged. Copper Range sold 48, off ¼, and Stewart 31⅜, off ⅛. Utah Apex sold 3; Isle Royale, 25½; Pond Creek, 16, and Mayflower, 3¾.

A Thrilling War-Time Serial of a German Spy and His Adventures in Love and Intrigue in England

SYNOPSIS.

Lady Cranston, whose brother, Major Felstead, has been taken prisoner by the Germans, goes to London to seek news of him. She returns to her home by the sea to hear that an empty Zeppelin basket has fallen on Dutchman's Common. The commandant of the district and Helen Fairclough, Lady Cranston's friend and her brother's fiancee, discuss the unusual occurrence. When they are alone a stranger, dishevelled and hungry, enters the room through a window. The women start to have him arrested when he halts them and gives them each a letter from Major Felstead. He secures from them a suit of English clothes and a promise to protect him.

CHAPTER V.

PHILIPPA'S breakdown was only momentary. With a few brusque words she brought the other two down to the level of her newly recovered equanimity.

"To be practical," she began, "we have no time to lose. I will go and get a suit of Dick's clothes, and, Helen, you had better take Mr. Lessingham into the gun room. Afterwards, perhaps you will have time to ring up the hotel."

Lessingham took a quick step toward her—almost as though he were about to make some importunate withdrawal. Philippa turned and met his almost pleading gaze. Perhaps she read there his instinct of self-abnegation.

"I am in command of the situation," she continued, a little more lightly. "Every one must please obey me. I shan't be more than five minutes."

His Gray Suit

She left the room, waving back Lessingham's attempt to open the door for her. He stood for a moment looking at the place where she had vanished. Then he turned round.

"Major Felstead's description," he said quietly, "did not do his sister justice."

"Philippa is a dear," Helen declared enthusiastically. "Just for a moment, though, I was terrified. She has a wonderful will."

"How long has she been married?"

"About six years."

"Are there—any children?"

Helen shook her head.

Sir Henry had a daughter by his first wife, who lives with us."

"Six years!" Lessingham repeated. "Why, she seems no more than a child. Sir Henry must be a great deal her senior."

"Sixteen years," Helen told him. "Philippa is twenty-nine. And now, don't be inquisitive any more, please, and come with me. I want to show you where to change your clothes."

She opened a door on the other side of the room, and pointed to a small apartment across the passage.

"If you'll wait in there," she begged, "I'll bring the clothes to you directly they come. I am going to telephone now."

"So many thanks," he answered. "I should like a pleasant bedroom and sitting-room, and a bathroom if posible. My luggage you will find already there. A friend in London has seen to that."

She looked at him curiously.

"You are very thorough, aren't you?" she remarked.

"The people of the country whom it is my destiny to serve all are," he replied. "One weak link, you know, may sometimes spoil the mightiest chain."

She closed the door and took up the telephone.

"Number three, please," she began. "Are you the hotel? The manager? Good! I am speaking for Lady Cranston. She wishes a sitting-room, bedroom, and bathroom reserved for a friend of ours who is arriving today—a Mr. Hamar Lessingham. You have his luggage already, I believe. Please do the best you can for him. Certainly. Thank you very much."

She set down the receiver. The door was quickly opened and shut. Philippa reappeared, carrying an armful of clothes.

"Why, you've brought his gray suit," Helen cried in dismay, "the one he looks so well in!"

"Don't be an idiot," Philippa scoffed. "I had to bring the first I could find. Take them in to Mr. Lesingham, and for heaven's sake see that he hurries! Henry's train is due, and he may be here at any moment."

"I'll tell him," Helen promised. "I'll smuggle him out of the back way, if you like."

Philippa laughed a little drearily. "A nice start that would be, if anyone ever traced his arrival!" she observed. "No, we must try and get him away before Henry comes, but, if the worst comes to the worst, we'll have him in and introduce him. Henry isn't likely to notice anything," she added, a little bitterly.

Helen disappeared with the clothes and returned almost immediately. Philippa was sitting in her old position by the fire.

"You're not worrying about this, dear, are you?" the former asked anxiously.

"I don't know," Philippa replied, without turning her head. "I don't know what may come of it, Helen. I have a queer sort of feeling about that man."

Helen sighed. "I suppose," she confessed, "I am the narrowest person on earth. I can think of one thing, and one thing only. If Mr. Lessingham keeps his word Dick will be here perhaps in a month, perhaps six weeks—certainly soon!"

"He will keep his word," Philippa said quietly. "He is that sort of man."

The door on the other side of the room was softly opened. Lessingham's head appeared.

"Could I have a necktie?" he asked diffidently.

Hearing the News

Philippa stretched out her hand and took one from the basket by her side.

"Better give him this," she said, handing it over to Helen. "It is one of Henry's which I was mending. Stop!"

She put up her finger. They all listened.

"The car!" Philippa exclaimed, rising hastily to her feet. "That is Henry! Go out with Mr. Lessingham, Helen," she continued, "and wait until he is ready. Don't forget that he is an ordinary caller, and bring him in presently."

Helen nodded understandingly and hurried out.

Philippa moved a few steps towards the other door. In a moment it was thrown open. Nora appeared, with her arm through her father's.

"I went to meet him, Mummy," she explained. "No uniform—isn't that a shame!"

Sir Henry patted her cheek and turned to greet his wife. There was a shadow upon his bronzed, handsome face as he watched her rather hesitating approach.

"Sorry I couldn't catch your train, Phil," he said her. "Had to make a call in the city so I came down from Liverpool street. Any luck?"

RECIPES FOR WARTIME

—VOTE FOR I & R TUESDAY—

TURNIP SOUP

One large turnip, one carrot, one onion, a little dripping, pepper and salt. Peel the turnip and cut into small blocks. Scrub and cut up the carrot. Slice the lemon and fry it until brown in the dripping. Add the vegetables and a quart of hot water. Season to taste, cook for two hours, then rub through a sieve. Boil up and serve with strips of toast.

RAGOUT FROM COLD MEAT.

Cut sufficient cold cooked meat into cubes of one inch to make one pint. Put one tablespoonful of butter and one of flour into a saucepan; mix and add half a pint of stock, stir until boiling; add half a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper, a teaspoonful of browing or kitchen bouquet and add the meat; beat quickly and serve.

LENTIL PORRIDGE.

Put three ounces of lentil flour into a saucepan and mix with a little cold milk or water until it is quite smooth and free from lumps. Stir in one pint of milk, or water, or half of each. Bring to the boil, stirring all the time, and salt to taste, and when thick and all the water is absorbed the porridge is ready.

TO PICKLE BRUSSELS SPROUTS.

Trim, wash and drain quite dry as many small Brussels sprouts as you require. Put them into a pan, sprinkle well with salt and let them remain for twenty-four hours. Drain off the moisture and, if you think they are too salt, put them in a colander and pour cold water over them. Put them into jars and cover them with boiling vinegar, flavored with a few whole peppercorns, a little bruised ginger, a bayleaf and enough sugar to take off the extreme acid of the vinegar—every pickle except beetroot is improved by boiling a little sugar in the vinegar. When the pickles are quite cold tie down.

A Few Hints on Plumbing

By Loretto C. Lynch

WITH all the other things women are now supposed to know comes up a message from the plumbers which says: "Women, know thy plumbing." Once upon a time we could call in the handy man and have shut off the water somewhere in the cellar. Once we could have him open up the sink trap and clean out the grease that had collected. But, alas, even he has been drafted and has no more time for us.

Perhaps there is no more effective avenue of disease than household plumbing. In districts where the building law is lax with regard to plumbing, diseases, often laid to other causes, are of frequent occurrence. But very often good plumbing, through the housewife's ignorance or neglect, becomes a menace to health.

Every woman should acquaint herself with the "shut off" valves. If you cannot locate these yourself, have someone who knows show them to you right now. One indeed makes a pitiful spectacle standing before a burst pipe with water flowing on an expensive rug unable to locate the "shut-off."

Builders usually give the plumbing end to a sub-contractor. And unless the owner is particularly well versed in plumbing and ever vigilant during its installation, the result is usually a poor job, offering opportunities for endless repairs in future.

When a house has been unoccupied for some time, it should be thoroughly aired before being reoccupied. In good plumbing there is a bend usually in the form of a U in the waste pipe. This is known as the "trap," and the water it contains is called a "water seal." The water seal prevents poisonous sewer gases from passing through the waste pipe and into the rooms. But when a house has been unoccupied for some time, the water in the trap evaporates and gives free access to any of these poisonous gases.

For your own safety, see that there is a trap and water seal on the waste pipe of your refrigerator if it is connected with the main waste pipe of your home. Otherwise these same gases may pass from the sewer into the refrigerator and contaminate the food contained therein.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Family Should Keep Quiet

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young woman of thirty, and have worked since I was seventeen, always earning a good salary and giving all of it to my mother, and I still continue to do so. I have four brothers who also take excellent care of our home and mother; all are single and do not even go out with girls. I have had a number of young men to pay attention to me, but on every occasion my mother and brothers would find some objections to them and insist upon my giving them up.

About a year ago I met a man whom I really loved; he is eight years my senior and a fine fellow, of good character and earns a fairly good salary. A few months ago he gave me a diamond ring and asked me to marry him as soon as he had a definite answer to some questions involving draft matters. Mother and brothers again began to sum up their objections, saying he could never give me the luxuries I now have at home, and persuaded me to break the engagement or they would not speak to me.

As he is deeply in love with me, and I am very much in need of advice, I ask you to study what I have written and advise me.

PERPLEXED.

A GREAT many families seem to feel that the daughter of the house is not entitled to a life of her own, and they assume the attitude your family has taken when there is any question of her marrying and leaving them. If your people have no real fault to find with the young man, except on sentimental grounds, I think at thirty years of age you would be quite justified in marrying him. If my mother he intended to come again soon.

Do you think it would be proper to write and invite him to a party that is to be given at my home by one of our girls' clubs. I do not wish to do anything that would seem forward.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright, 1916, by King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

JIM'S voice cut through the darkness like a keen knife: "Dalton happens to me the husband of my sister Virginia. She has left him. Virginia is a proud woman—the thing must torture her. She has been in the West for a year. She gets back tomorrow or next day. I don't want her flicked on the raw by hearing my friends speak of him."

The sentences were wrung from him one at a time.

But Betty saved the day.

"Jimmie, old pal, neither Terry nor I would dream of making friends with a man who had hurt you in any way. This Dalton man doesn't count. You'll let me meet—Virginia soon, won't you lad?"

Betty always knew just what to say. I could feel Jim's tense muscles relaxing. In a wave of misery it came over me that I hadn't before known anything about Virginia save that she and Phoebe, youngest of the Harrisons, were traveling in the West. This first intimate glimpse of my husband's family had been shared with Betty and Captain Winston.

And he realized my feelings—or perhaps, better still, because he needed me to share his—Jim reached out and took my hand between both of his. I nestled in against his shoulder and set my lips, with sudden disloyalty, on the hand that lay above mine.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

JIM'S working day begins at 8, and the car factory lies across the river. So I had to get up at 6 this morning. I woke Jim half an hour later. But Neal, whose job didn't summon him till 9, I permitted to sleep until Jim was almost ready for breakfast, then I hurried my brother off to the bathroom to wash and shave, and tried to tidy up his room a bit before I served Jim's breakfast on the refectory table.

Jim had small appetite for his coffee. I didn't blame him. Over on the window still lay Neal's collar and tie. His blue serge coat was draped across the back of a chair and his hat hung crazily on a branch of one of the Italian torcheres. The room had an air of having been slept in. It was from this tawdry setting that Jim limped off to his day's work.

An hour later I saw Neal start jauntily away. And then I grimly set the place in order.

Scarcely had I finished when Evvy arrived. While I dr sand she perched coslly on my bed and began to chat about "that icicle of a Bryce woman," and "hands me Captain Winston," and "poor, wicked Pat Dalton." There I stopped her; I didn't want to learn anything about the husband of Jim's sister, Virginia, from Evvy.

Evvy flitted from the subject good-naturedly.

"Put on the cunning little dress you wore yesterday," she said. "It's so becoming."

I crossed obediently to the chair where I had put the dress to air the night before, and as I lifted it the telegram from Tom Mason fell from its folds. The yellow paper was scented with my violet sachet—it had an intimate air. I crumpled it in my hand, remembering that it had lain all yesterday in the bosom of my dress.

The Telegram Destroyed

"Isn't it cool enough for a suit?" I asked. "Anyway, I hate to wear the same dress two days in succession—I think they wear out so much faster that way."

"Maybe," responded Evvy, indifferently—whether or no dresses wore out quickly was of small moment ot her.

I crept into my closet to slip out of my kimono and into a suit; but before I emerged, fully clad, I had torn the telegram into tiny bits.

Then I put on my hat, and we started at once for Tom Mason's; but the morning had slipped away, and it was noon before we arrived.

There is something solid and reassuring about Mr. Mason's dignified, old-fashioned house. And his quaint, old-fashioned housekeeper, in her gray mohair and dainty white kerchief, gave me a glimpse of something very sweet in Mr. Mason's nature. The "Old Lady," as Evvy called Mrs. West right to her face, spoke of Mr. Mason as "Thomie," and when I saw how this sweet-faced, white-haired woman loved "her boy" I was ashamed of every doubt I had ever felt of Tom Mason.

Mrs. West had sent Jim's package down to the Mason offices, thinking that it might contain something that "Tommie's" secretary needed for some interior decorating work they were taking up. I wanted to go for it at once, but that violated all Mrs. West's ideas of hospitality, and we simply had to stay to luncheon—a delicious affair, as dainty as the "Old Lady" herself.

After lunch Evvy suggested a matinee, some shopping, all sorts of ideas that would delay my getting that parcel off to Mr. Mason. And he needed it by Wednesday! I got more and more flurried in my desire to go to the office at once. And, in the end, I had to reveal to Evvy the whole story of the blue robe her cousin had given to me, so much against my wishes, and which he now was "borrowing" from me—to my great relief. Evvy gurgled with delight:

"Oh, Anne, isn't that too cunning! Tom has a really-truly-for-sure 'crush' on you."

Quieted Him

At a music hall a young "knut" and his lady love caused some annoyance to those sitting near by continually talking and giggling. Hints to quiet them were of no avail until a man, who, with his "missus," occupied a seat just behind the amorous couple, determined to end it.

Speaking quite loudly, the man said, "I call it a shame, spoiling such a row that people can't hear!"

At this the young man turned round, and in an affected manner said, "I hope I am not annoying you, sir?"

"Oh, no," answered the man, "you are not annoying me! You go on with your little tales; I likes 'em. But I was just sayin' to my missus that it's a jolly shame for that young woman on the stage to make such a noise, so that I can't properly hear all that you're saying!"

The young man was quiet after that.

Should Let 'Em Grow

Mrs. Bridley was doing her morning marketing, and she was determined that the grocer should not take advantage of her youth and inexperience.

"These eggs are dreadfully small," she criticized.

"That's the kind the farmer brings me," answered the grocer. "They are just fresh from the country this morning."

"Yes," said the bride, "and that's the trouble with those farmers. They don't allow them to get their eggs sold that they take them off the nest too soon!"

CONCEDE GREEN WILL WIN IN RHODE ISLAND

By CHARLES O. POWER

Providence, R. I., Nov. 2.—Republicans generally in the First Congressional district concede the election of Theodore Francis Green, the Democratic candidate. This is the district that has been represented for eight years in Washington by George F. O'Shaunessy, Democratic candidate for United States Senator.

Mr. Green is opposed by Clarke Burdick, self-styled "war mayor" of Newport. This contest is generally looked upon as the best joke of the present campaign. People remember when Secretary Daniels of the Navy suggested that Mayor Burdick close disorderly houses, in order to safeguard the health of sailors, the Mayor, in high dudgeon, declared there were no such places in his bailiwick. They also remember that condition soon after that became so bad that the "war Mayor" was obliged to appeal to the Secretary of the Navy to declare a hundred zone in Newport.

The impression I carried away from the town of East Providence was that Mr. O'Shaunessy would run better than ever—and he has always carried it—that Mr. Archambault would have a margin on Governor Beeckman and that James Hennessy, Democrat, would be elected to the State Senate. Warren is a town with many French voters. It has usually been an even thing between the Democrats and the Republicans there. But this time there is reason to believe it will go strongly Democratic, even electing James Munro to the State Senate.

BRISTOL FOR DEMOCRATS.

Bristol, with its great rubber plants and cotton mills, is the domain of the Colt family. Samuel P. Colt is the overlord of the place. He employs about 3,500 people in his works. The town, for the greater part of the Summer, was a sort of an armed camp because of strikes on the part of the Colt employes for better pay. From what I could learn Democratic candidates are going to carry Bristol.

From Bristol to Portsmouth by ferry and then a trolley run of twelve miles, through a great potato raising section and splendid farm lands, brought me to Newport. In normal times the population of this city is about twenty-five thousand. It now has a population of about one hundred thousand, this great influx being caused by the new war industries which have been located here, largely through the instrumentality of Mr. O'Shaunessy. The Newport water system was inadequate for the needs of the new population, and it has become necessary to transport water daily from Fall River.

Mr. O'Shaunessy carried Newport two years ago by about twelve hundred majority, but the great things he has done for the city since the outbreak of war causes many people there to say he will "sweep the city" this time. This means, of course, that the Democratic candidate for Governor will also poll an unusually large vote. I heard several predictions to the effect that Mr. Archambault would have a margin of at least fifteen hundred votes.

For many years money has been the big and probably the deciding factor in the Second Congressional District of this State. Cranston is the only city in the district, many small towns running to the Connecticut border making up the remainder of it. This year the Democrats are going to be especially watchful for evidences of this kind of political corruption. They will co-operate in every possible way with the special agents of the Department of Justice, who have been assigned to enforce the Garry Corrupt Practices Act, which makes it a crime, punishable both by jail sentence and fine, for the giving or the taking of a bribe.

CRANSTON OPPOSES G. O. P.

Cranston is normally Republican but, on account of the tremendous increases in street car fares, the people are incensed against the Republican party and will probably elect the Democratic candidates to the General Assembly.

West Warwick, on the Pawtuxet River, has a large French population. The Colt and Beeckman forces have been putting forth great efforts in this place but apparently to no avail. Here, too, the people have suffered tremendously from recent high prices for street car rides prescribed by the Republican Public Utilities Commission. They have held indignation meetings and about everyone in the place is working heavily in favor of giving a Democratic Governor and General Assembly a chance to handle the case of the people against the Rhode Island Company.

The Second District is heavily Republican. It has been represented for four years by Walter Stegneg, who seeks re-election. Stephen P. Casey, Democratic candidate, has made a splendid fight against big odds, and, if he wins, it will be a surprising and notable victory.

Rhode Island has a population of about 700,000, of which Providence has about 275,000, Pawtucket 70,000, Central Falls 30,000, Woonsocket 45,000, East Providence 20,000, Cranston 30,000 and Newport a normal population of 25,000.

These cities comprise about five-sevenths of the entire State population. Chairman Francis E. Sullivan of the Democratic State Committee says of Shaunessy and Archambault, candidates for United States Senator and Governor, respectively, will have a majority in every one of them. He is satisfied that everything that could be done to elect these candidates and the Democratic Congressional candidates has been done.

EXPECT LARGE MAJORITY.

He places the majority of Mr. O'Shaunessy at not less than 5,000 and of Mr. Archambault between 2,000 and 4,000.

The street railway issue, he says, will affect Mr. Archambault because he proposed a measure of relief for the people and will defeat Governor Beeckman, because, notwithstanding his eleventh hour advertisement to the contrary, he has never proposed any measure of relief. Furthermore, says the chairman, his own advertisement is the best evidence that could be produced to prove Governor Beeckman does not know what he is talking about when he says he favors some policy of State control in the street car system.

Chairman Sullivan says the Democrats will elect at least twenty-one Senators out of a possible thirty-nine and between fifty-six and eighty-two out of a possible one hundred members of the House.

Another rousing rally will be held in Infantry Hall, Sunday night, at which the chief speaker will be Henry Morgenthau, United States Ambassador to Turkey for three years, up to the declaration of war against Germany by this country.

WHY RUN-DOWN PALE EXHAUSTED WOMEN SHOULD TAKE IRON

"There can be no beautiful, healthy, rosy-cheeked, steady eyed women without iron. Where the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks—their charm of womanly femme depart. I always insist that my patients take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—not metallic iron which often corrodes the stomach and does more harm than good. Nuxated Iron is easily assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard women in two weeks' time in many cases. I have advised it in my own practice with most surprising results," says Ferdinand King, M.D., well known New York physician and medical author. NUXATED IRON

PREVENT INFLUENZA

If you are "run down" or out of condition, if slothful bowels have allowed poisonous impurities to accumulate in your system, you are liable to suffer severely with the influenza. Dr. True's Elixir, the famous household medicine of 67 years' reputation, will keep you free from influenza or make an attack light and easily thrown off. Why? Because is a vegetable medicine that puts the system in good condition, prevents and relieves constipation, regulates the stomach and improves the digestive powers. It can do you no harm, it is purely vegetable. Ask your druggist for it, or write Dr. J. F. True & Co., Auburn, Me. 40c, 60c and $1.00.

BOXING SET APPOINTED TO SERVE

Miah Murray, Robert McKirdy and George Tuohey to Officially Aid in Drive

By NICK FLATLEY.

Boston and New England professional sport sets will take a hand in helping along the United War Work Drive. That has officially been decided. Owing to the fact that there were disagreements and misunderstandings and things like that over in New York, the local sport campaign was tied up at the start.

But that's all over now. The New England committee has been granted full power to do just what is being just that. From now on, it might be mentioned, the actual details of the Drive Week sport program will be coming to light.

The big trouble was with boxing, as everybody knows. In New York Cofrroth found himself up against more or less objection when he stepped in to take charge. In New York there are more boxing magnates than there are "cooties," just now in Alsace-Lorraine. Said magnates usually manage to spoil things, but they missed out this time.

ALL O. K. WITH BOXING.

Boxing and wrestling and all the other sports are to be in on this affair. The word has been passed along from New York that those who announcement no glove swapping were all false. After a long and nervous wait the New England committee felt itself endowed with sufficient power and to go ahead.

The committee found that out and then got busy. Chairman William F. Garcelon announced that service football teams of both army and navy were ready and eager to do their bit; that college teams had offered their services.

The boxing situation, together with the wrestling, has been the knotty problem. The pull and water blend of amateur sport and professional sport is necessary here, never have pulled perfectly together, and never will, but they need not necessarily pull apart.

All indications hereabouts point toward the committee that they will pull together for this big objective. Everybody has been asked to help and everybody will, no doubt, despite all past differences.

RIGHT MEN SELECTED.

A committee appointed at the meeting will handle the boxing and wrestling ends and angles of the campaign. The committee comprises George V. Brown and Fred Leonard of the New England General Sports Committee. Miah Murray of the Amory A. A., Bob McKirdy of the Commercial A. C. and George V. Tuohey, wrestling-boxing promoter.

Harry Ayer has charge of the golf end of things and is rapidly getting the devotees of the bonnie Scotch game lined up.

The committee, in toto, will meet Monday afternoon at headquarters. No. 666 Sears building, and at that meeting the general program for the period of drive, from November 9-15, will be forthcoming.

THORPE of the Carlisle Indians' football team is the real champion of the nimble toe artists with a record of seven goals this year. He won both the Penn State and Syracuse games for his team by dropping three field goals in each contest.

YOUNG BRITT, persistent challenger of Johnny Cullen at 115 pounds, has been matched up with Patsy Kline for a fifteen-round bout at Baltimore, November 11. Britt has been mixed up with Frankie and the Irish lad. They were both good men at that.)

JIM STEWART has accepted terms for a twenty-round bout with John Willie or Marvin Hart at San Francisco, Thanksgiving Day.

* * *

YALE has selected its team for the big games the rest of the season. The line-up: Kilpatrick, le.; Hobbs, lt.; Anderson, lg.; Hobson, c.; Greene, rg.; Brown, rt.; Natelle, re.; Murphy or Bingham, qb.; Philbin, lhb.; Bridges, rhb.; Coy, fb. (Remember this star bunch?)

FULLERTON OUT WITH BASEBALL HONOR ROLL

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

When the peevishness and petulance which now pervades the populated portions of the world ends, a business called baseball must be rehabilitated.

Without wishing to be impolite, it would be a fine thing if at that time all the club owners and players who have been actively engaged in calling each other names, who have helped to bring disrepute upon a clean sport by their business methods, should retire.

But ignoring those whom we would like to see return and engage actively in the business are:

Major T. L. Huston,
Captain James Scott,
Lieutenant Ejnar Risey.
Lieutenant Leon Cudore.
Lieutenant Harry McCormick.
Lieutenant Jacob Ruppert.
Lieutenant Marty McHale.
Sergeant Hank Gowdy.
Ensign Ernest Shore.
Yeoman John Barry.
Yeoman Heinie Zimmerville.
Y. M. C. A. Director John Evers.

This list might be lengthened considerably. No idea if it would be fair to put old Captain 'Til Huston at the head of organized baseball, place an officer who has commanded men in France at the head of each team; fill the ruffle with fellows who have gone into the army and navy, and make it semi-military. Would you subscribe to stock to buy out the old owners and invest in such teams?

* * *

After listening to the opinions of ball players who have fought in France, and those who are over there fighting, on ball players who are not over and "ain't never goin' over," one feels more and more of the opinion that Captain Houston was dead right when he wrote from Franke last Spring and explained to the club owners what the attitude of himself and others were going to be towards fellows who piffle away their time at baseball, or writing baseball, or playing at it in the world's series, while they fight.

Cap, in a real man who writes real English in real words, and he told us fair. If baseball had listened then, instead of accusing Cats of hurting the game, it would still be the game still game—with a lot different players.

Donovan and Sacco Box Fast Draw at C. A. C.

By RINGSIDE.

There was plenty of batting at the Commercial A. C. four in the ring and out on the floor of the Beacon St. Besides the whirlwind bouts between Johnny Donovan and Young Sacco and Eddie Gerard and Bobby Josephs, there was a private one that caused plenty of commotion.

A couple of youths with a grievance started mixing in one section in the back of the hall. In about a minute there was a healthy young riot in progress and a big lot of fans made a quick exit. Order was finally secured by the management and the disturbers were given the gate.

Donovan and Sacco battled twelve rugged rounds, Referee Larry Conley deciding the affair a draw. Donovan appeared to have slightly the better of the milling.

There was very little fancy sparring, both boys depending mostly on hard wallops to end the contest via the knockout route. Up to the time of the private bath, which came with the fifth round in progress, Johnny had a decided edge. Sacco's lefts ended matters up to the eleventh, when the South Boston boy came through with a finish.

In the second round Donovan landed stiff lefts and rights to Sacco's chin. Sacco took the canvas for a few seconds, but came back strong

HARVARD UNITS TO MERGE IN ONE TEAM

Harvard's two football squads, the S. A. T. C. and the Naval Unit are to merge and play hereafter as the Harvard Service Football team. This decision was reached following a meeting of a representative of the college, Captain Carroll Dunham of the S. A. T. C. and Ensign J. G. Alley of the Naval Unit.

The football powers at the university have been in favor of this move, figuring that it would give Harvard a more nearly representative team than would the divided squads.

Coach "Pooch" Donovan will be at the head of matters and will have for assistants Eddie Daley, captain of the 1911 Dartmouth team, who was boss of the S. A. T. C. gridders, "Goose" Riley, the formerly Holy Cross star of the Naval Unit and Charles Linehan, the one-time Rindge coach. The latter, who has been on the hospital list, is back on the job.

Daily scrimmages during the past week have given the coaches a good line on the material that will be picked as the Service varsity squad.

Says the popularity of the Psychic in fashion and society circles is largely the result of the ambitious, the intrigues, the rivalry, the envy and resentment, dissipation and jealousy of their members. Many of them first entertain the readings of the Psychic out of the curiosity and, if interested, remain the master's pupils. Edson Wright's Psychic work informs, advises and is not a servant and impartial medium.

EDSON WRIGHT says: "Only a Greater Psychic can be master what Psychic studies or readings may be sought this Winter, Autumn. He stands supreme, endowed by nature with a marvelous power, so different from all others, the recognized leader of all Psychics. His perfect power to soar above the petty, superficial, may lead you to health, peace, success and happiness. Edson Wright is now receiving callers every day except Sunday, 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. # THE REAL ISSUE BETWEEN WILSON AND HIS CRITICS

Shall We Have Peace Now on America's Terms or Shall We Waste American Lives?

The issue has now become clearly defined between President Wilson and that group of reactionary politicians who control the Republican National organization and whose chief spokesmen are Roosevelt and Lodge.

The AMERICAN challenges any intelligent American to reread the last two German notes to President Wilson and President Wilson's reply and then to read Theodore Roosevelt's and Lodge's attack upon the President for holding any communication at all with Germany, AND HAVING THUS READ THEM TO SAY THAT THE PLAN OF THESE POLITICAL OPPONENTS OF THE PRESIDENT DOES NOT ENDANGER THE LIVES OF HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS WITHOUT A DEFINITE OBJECT.

The AMERICAN makes the assertion without fear of successful contradiction that the President's method of dealing with this critical situation is calculated to save useless further bloodshed, while the attitude of Roosevelt, Lodge, Weeks, and, strange to say of Calvin Coolidge, who now pipes up with his "me too" to Lodge and Weeks, is calculated to continue a purposeless, objectless, unnecessary sacrifice of an untold number of lives.

Months ago the President laid down certain terms of peace. They were published to the world. The peoples of all our associates in the war accepted them. If anybody opposed them he considered himself in such a minority that he remained silent.

LLOYD GEORGE, GREAT BRITAIN'S GREAT WAR MINISTER, speaking to the American soldiers in France the day after the terms were made public, declared:

"PRESIDENT WILSON'S GREAT DELIVERANCE OF YESTERDAY MADE CLEAR WHAT WE ARE FIGHTING FOR. IF THE KAISER AND HIS ADVISERS ARE PREPARED TOMORROW TO ACCEPT THE CONDITIONS STATED BY YOUR PRESIDENT HE CAN HAVE PEACE, NOT ONLY WITH AMERICA, BUT ALSO WITH GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE."

These terms were not mild terms to Germany. They were the terms of a victor. They were predicated upon the assumption of victory, and they could have been based upon no other assumption because a victorious Germany would have laughed at them, and a Germany which considered herself able in the end to force a stalemate would have refused them flatly. These fourteen terms included everything that would tend to establish permanent peace and justice in the world, so far as fallible human beings can by anticipation establish anything permanent in transitory human affairs.

Suddenly, without warning, to the surprise of everyone, Germany, who knows her own internal conditions best and who knows also the condition of her allies, sent a note to the President declaring that she stood ready to accept the President's terms of peace and, in pledge of her good faith was prepared to evacuate the allied territories which she now occupies as a conqueror.

She did not demand the reciprocal evacuation of the German colonies by the allies, nor the evacuation of the territories of her allies. She proposed to concede all and to ask no concessions in return. She proposed to give up Belgium and northern France and her other great conquests in the east, all of which might be used for trading purposes at the peace conference. In her proposal it is ALL give on her part, SO FAR AS IT APPEARS ON THE SURFACE OF THE PROPOSAL, and no take. Now what was the President to do? On the face of the note Germany proposed a complete surrender to the President's terms. If he had treated that note with silent contempt what would be the result? Let us quote General Sir Frederick Maurice, the distinguished British general, who was for four years on the British General Staff. Speaking yesterday a word of warning to the allies, he called attention to the fact that the war was by no means over, that the present German retreat was shortening the German lines and making it easier for a smaller number of men to defend them, and by still further retreating before reaching their own frontier they could shorten their lines 150 miles more. That, of course, would mean the writing off of almost all the American troops that we have in France. General Maurice continued: "The Prussian autocrats are fighting for their lives, and while their position is weakened by the collapse of Ludendorff and the extremists, it is still a long step from their point of view to ours. Doubtless they are hoping that the publication of the allied terms will rally the German people around them."

Suppose now that the President on receiving Germany's note accepting our terms of peace had either kept a contemptuous silence or had replied by a demand for an unconditional surrender. What would have been the result upon the German people? Is it not too clear for argument that they would conclude that the Preisdent, America and the allies were insincere, and that their rulers were right when they declared that Germany was fighting a war in self defence for her very life against jealous enemies determined to destroy her on account of her industrial and commercial efficiency and growing prosperity?

There is no military man whose opinion is worth a cent who is not outspoken in his praise of the manner in which the German armies have conducted their recent retreat. French, British and American officers have joined publicly in declaring their admiration for what is freely described as a masterly retreat. This indicates that in the German army the skill of the officers, and the discipline and hardihood of the rank and file has not been impaired. It is also admitted on all sides that the German soldiers are well fed and in perfect physical condition. It is not that Germany has LOST THE POWER TO FIGHT that makes her admit defeat and sue for peace upon her enemies' publicly declared terms.

Now if Germany is willing to surrender unconditionally, of course we shall be very willing to accept her unconditional surrender. But it must not be forgotten that nations rarely make an unconditional surrender. Unconditional surrender ordinarily is demanded of a nation only after its armies have been defeated and DESTROYED. The German armies have been defeated, but they have not been destroyed. The difference in numbers between the Germans and the allies on the western front in favor of the allies is probably not so great today as it was a year ago and for a whole year prior to 1917, when the Germans, though greatly outnumbered, stood behind their entrenchments and resisted the attacks of the allies for a whole year and a half, yielding scarcely enough ground to be discerned on the map. They are now retreating to a shorter and more easily defended line. Their armies are intact, and are still able to make the allies pay a terrible toll as the price of pushing them back even to their frontiers.

But Germany's people have grown war weary. They have suffered in their nerves and minds from four and a half years of weary isolation from the world. They have suffered for four and a half years from the denial of every civilized luxury, even of soap to keep them clean. They have suffered from the denial of palatable food. They have even suffered from the denial of the news of the world and from the denial of the world's good feeling.

They have learned that the war was not what their rulers represented it at the beginning—a war of self defence. They know now from the revelations of their own statesmen that it was a war of aggression on the part of Germany, inaugurated with an almost blasphemous violation of a solemn treaty, and prosecuted with such reckless and stupid indifference to the established rules of war, and to the standards of civilization, as to alienate the good will of the whole world.

The German people also realize that, however great their present power of resistance may be, if the war is fought to the bitter end Germany must be defeated, and that such a defeat would be almost utter destruction. All these conditions have led to a revulsion of public sentiment in Germany. These events have awakened the Germans to the fact that their rulers are not only capable of being in the wrong and of plunging them into oceans of blood without right on their side, but that they are capable of being stupid and incompetent, and that their military strategists and their military system are not invincible. They realize now that against the armies of France their military leaders and their military system have suffered defeat under most humiliating circumstances, and they know that the armies of France were the only armies which in the beginning were at all prepared to meet them, while America has scarcely begun to fight, and the allies of Germany are scattering as rats desert a sinking ship.

So the German people have lost confidence both in the good faith and the capacity of their rulers. No disillusionment could be more complete. They have become sick of a war which has isolated them from the world, and deprived them of the world's commerce just at a moment when by the arts of peace Germany was conquering the leadership in the world's trade.

But if the German people had been confronted with scornful silence or a demand for unconditional surrender such as Roosevelt and Lodge and their confederates are demanding shall be the attitude of this government, and on which demand they are asking the American people to repudiate the President by electing a Republican Congress—we ask what MUST have been the effect upon the minds of the German people, and what they would certainly have resolved to do if the President had failed to reply to their note accepting his terms, or had replied with a demand for an unconditional surrender? Would not the warning of General Maurice come true? Would they not say that silence under such circumstances or a demand for an unconditional surrender meant that the President and America were insincere and were bent upon the destruction of Germany? Believing that, would not the Germans be driven by despair to go on with the struggle? If peace is to bring them nothing but such terms as their enemies may choose to impose upon them when they are helpless; if peace can bring them nothing but the terms which their commercial and industrial rivals may impose when they are helpless; if peace is to bring them nothing but the conditions which the enemies whose bloodlust has been excited may choose to impose; is it possible for the ordinary German to believe that peace would bring him better conditions than war? Is it not almost certain that the demand for unconditional surrender, extraordinary as it is in the history of war between nations, will drive all the German classes to the standards of their old autocrats and make them fight on with their backs to the wall in the hope that some strange mood of fortune may turn things upside down, as she often does in war and as she several times has already done in this war? Would not the demand upon which these Republican politicians are basing their campaign for the election of a Congress hostile to the President convince the German people that they have everything to gain and nothing to lose by continuing the war?

Now, on the other hand, we know to a moral certainty that we can defeat the Germans and ULTIMATELY impose unconditional terms upon them. But if we do not want the DESTRUCTION of Germany then we do not want unconditional surrender. If the President's terms are satisfactory, and they have been publicly acquiesced throughout the entente world, then we do not need unconditional surrender, and to continue the war for the purpose of forcing an unconditional surrender is merely recklessly to shed the best blood of America, and to fill a large part of the fields of France with the bodies of American soldiers uselessly slain. If the fathers and mothers, sisters and brothers and wives of America want to repudiate the President at such a price, of course they can do so by electing a Republican Congress.

It should be understood, of course, that President Wilson has made it perfectly clear to Germany that the men who brought on this war must not remain in power, and that the German armies shall be placed in a position where they cannot take advantage of any armistice that is granted them. The President's terms, in a military sense, render Germany powerless, but there is this difference between the President's attitude and the attitude of these gentlemen who cry unconditional surrender without thought of who will pay the price in blood. That difference is very important to Germans. On the President's terms they will enter peace negotiations with America's pledge of honor that they will not be asked to submit to more than our American terms publicly expressed by the President and acceded to by the entente world. Unconditional surrender would mean to the Germans any terms which an enemy government under influence of revenge or in fear of future German victories in commerce and industry may choose to impose.

This is the issue. It is as clear as the waters of Lake Constance, and it involves the question of life or death of thousands upon thousands of American young men. It is one of the greatest issues that was ever presented to the American people.

Repudiate the President on next Tuesday, and we shall probably see the unconditional surrenderists of the entente world raising their heads, encouraged by the American election to believe that President Wilson cannot go through with his policy.

What American citizen of Massachusetts, Rhode Island or New Hampshire, whether Republican or Democrat, can fail in such a situation to see that it is his duty to support Walsh of Massachusetts, Jameson and Reed of New Hampshire, and O'Shaunessy of Rhode Island, and Long of Massachusetts as well, since his opponent, Calvin Coolidge, has seen fit to make the Roosevelt-Lodge-Weeks opposition to the President a State issue.
